Capital and accumulation, $650,000.
THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The object in conducting its business has been to provide perfect security under all conceivable circumstances, for the payment of its losses under its policies, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessments beyond his premium. The directors are required to be particularly interested in the company, and they give their personal attention; and bonds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties. Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

Highly Important to Farmers.
THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds, (belonging to farmers,) household furniture, grain in barns, live stock, etc., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently you will have no losses other than your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Experience has shown that two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by LEAVING THEM ALONE.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for the last fourteen months we have not had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of insurance.

TACON'S JUSTICE.

A STORY OF CUBA.

[Bello, in his valuable "History of Cuba," devotes a considerable space to the administration of Tacon, who has left rather a doubtful reputation in Havana, his energy in effecting improvements having been combined with such a degree of violence that to the people at large he was an object of terror, rather than of gratitude. In accomplishing his purposes, life was counted of little value, and many of the first people were sacrificed to his unscrupulous zeal. The following story, which was related to the author in Havana, illustrates his romantic love of justice:—]

During the first year of Tacon's governorship, there was a young Creole girl named Miralda Estalez, who kept a little cigar store in the Calle de Mercaderes, and whose shop was the resort of all the young men of the town who loved a choice-made and superior cigar. Miralda was only seventeen, without mother or father living, and earned a humble though sufficient support by her industry in the manufacture we have named, and by the sales of her little store. She was a picture of ripened tropical beauty, with a finely-rounded form, a lovely face of soft, olive tint, and teeth that a Tuscarora might envy her. At times, there was a dash of languor in her dreamy eye that would have warmed an anchorite; and then her cheerful jests were so delicate yet free, that she had unwittingly turned the heads, not to say hearts, of half the young merchants in the Calle de Mercaderes. But she dispensed her favors without partiality; none of the rich and gay exquisites of Havana could say they had ever received any particular acknowledgment from the fair young girl to their warm and constant attention. For this one she had a pleasant smile, for another a few words of pleasing gossip, and for a third a snatch of a Spanish song; but to none did she give her confidence except to young Pedro Mantanez, a fine looking boatman, who plied between the Punta and Moro castle, on the opposite side of the harbor.

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his class in intelligence, appearance and associations, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and loved the beautiful Miralda with an ardent romantic in his fidelity and truth. He was a sort of leader among the boatmen in the harbor by reason of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick witted sagacity was often turned for the benefit of his comrades. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor since a boy, for he had followed his calling of waterman from boyhood, as his fathers had done before him. Miralda in turn ardently loved Pedro; and when he came at night and sat in the back part of her little shop, she had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his lips. Now and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would hoist a tiny sail in the prow of his boat and securing the little stern awning over Miralda's head, steer out into the gulf and coast along the romantic shore.

There was a famous ruse, well known at this time in Havana, named count Almonte, who had frequently visited Miralda's shop and conceived quite a passion for the girl, and, indeed, he had grown to be one of her most liberal customers. With a cunning shrewdness and knowledge of human nature, the count beseeched the heart of his intended victim without appearing to do so, and carried on his plan of operations for many weeks before the innocent girl even suspected his possessing a partiality for her, until one day she was surprised by a present from him of so rare and costly a nature as to lead her to suspect the donor's intention at once, and to promptly decline the offered gift. Undismayed by this, still the count continued his profuse patronage in a way to which Miralda could find no plausible pretext of complaint.

At last, seizing upon what he considered a favorable moment, Count Almonte declared his passion to Miralda, besought her to come and be the mistress of his broad and rich estates at Cerito near the city, and offered all the promises of wealth, favor and fortune; but in vain. The pure minded girl scorned his offer, and bade him never more insult her by visiting her shop. Ashamed but not confounded, the count retired, but only to weave a new snare whereby he could entangle her, for he was not one to be so easily thwarted.

One afternoon not long after this, as the twilight was settling over the town, a file of soldiers halted just opposite the door of the little cigar-shop, when a young man, wearing a lieutenant's insignia, entered and asked the attendant if her name was Miralda Estalez, to which she mildly responded.

"Then you will please to come with me."

"By what authority?" asked the trembling girl.

"The order of the governor-general."

"Then I must obey you," she answered, and prepared to follow him at once.

Stepping to the door with her, the young officer directed his men to march on; and, getting into a volante, told Miralda they would drive to the guard house. But, to the surprise of the girl, she soon after discovered that they were rapidly passing the city gates, and immediately were dashing off on the road to Cerito. Then it was that she began to fear some trick had been played upon her; and these fears were soon confirmed by the volante's turning down the long alley of palms that led to the estate of Count Almonte. It was in vain to expostulate now; she felt that she was in the power of that reckless nobleman, and the pretended officer and soldiers were his own people, who had adopted the disguise of the Spanish army uniform.

Count Almonte met her at the door, told her to fear no violence, that her wishes should be respected in all things, save her personal liberty; that he trusted in time, to persuade her to look more favorably upon him, and that in all things he was her slave. She replied contemptuously to his words, and charged him with the cowardly trick by which he had gained control of her liberty. But she was left by herself, though watched by his orders at all times to prevent her escape.

She knew very well that the power and will of Count Almonte were too strong for any humble friend of hers to attempt to thwart; and yet she somehow felt a conscious strength in Pedro, and secretly cherished the idea that he would discover her place of confinement, and adopt some means to deliver her. The stiletto in the constant companion of the lower class, and Miralda had been used to wear one even in her store against contingency; but she now regarded the tiny weapon with peculiar satisfaction, and slept with it in her bosom!

Small was the clue by which Pedro Mantanez discovered the trick of Count Almonte. First this was found out, then that circumstance, and these, being put together, they led to other results, until the indefatigable lover was at last fully satisfied that he had discovered her place of confinement. Disguised as a friar of the order of San Fulpe, he sought Count Almonte's gates at a favorable moment, met Miralda, cheered her with fresh hopes, and retired to arrange some certain plan for her delivery. There was time to think now; heretofore he had not permitted himself even an hour's sleep; but she was safe,—that is, not in immediate danger,—and he could breathe more freely. He knew not with whom to advise; he feared to speak with those above him in society, lest they might betray his purpose to the count, and his own liberty, by some means, be thus jeopardized. He could consider with no one but himself; he must be his own counsellor in this critical case.

At last, as if in despair, he started to his feet one day, and exclaimed to himself, "Why not go to head quarters at once? why not see the governor-general and tell him the whole truth? Ah! see him?—how is that to be effected?—And then this Count Almonte is a nobleman! They say Tacon loves justice. We shall see.—I will go to the governor general; it cannot do any harm, if it does not do any good. I can but try." And Pedro did seek the governor. True, he did not at once get audience of him—not the first, second, nor the third time; but he persevered, and was admitted at last. Here he told his story in a free, manly voice, undisturbedly and openly in all things, so that Tacon was pleased.

"And the girl," asked the governor general, over whose countenance a dark scowl had gathered, "is she thy sister?"

"No, Excellencia, she is dearer still; she is my betrothed."

The governor, bidding him come nearer, took a golden cross from his table, and handing it to the boatman, as he regarded him searchingly, said:

"Swear that what you have related to me is true, as you hope for heaven!"

"I swear," said Pedro, kneeling and kissing the emblem with pious reverence.

The governor turned to his table, wrote a few brief lines, and touching a bell, summoned a page from an adjoining room, whom he ordered to send the captain of the guard to him.—Prompts as were all who had any connection with the governor's household, the officer appeared at once, and received the written order, with directions to bring count Almonte and a young girl named Miralda immediately before him.—Pedro was sent to an ante-room, and the business of the day passed on as usual in the reception hall of the governor.

Less than two hours had transpired when the count and Miralda stood before Tacon. Neither knew the nature of the business which had summoned them there. Almonte half suspected the truth, and the poor girl argued to herself that her fate could not be improved by the interference, let its nature be what it might.

"Count Almonte, you doubtless know why I have ordered you to appear."

"Excellencia, I fear that I have been indiscreet," was the reply.

"You adopted the uniform of the guards for your own private purposes upon this young girl, did you not?"

"Excellencia, I cannot deny it."

"Declare, upon your honor, count Almonte, whether she is unmarried when you have thus kept a prisoner."

"Excellencia, she is as pure as when she entered beneath my roof," was the truthful reply.

The governor turned, and whispered something to his page, then continued his questions to the count, while he made some minutes upon paper. Pedro was now summoned to explain some matter, and as he entered, the governor general turned his back for one moment as if to seek for some papers upon his table, while Miralda was pressed into the boatman's arms. It was but for a moment, and the next, Pedro was bowing humbly before Tacon. A few moments more and the governor's page returned, accompanied by a monk of the church of Santa Clara, with the emblems of his office.

"Holy father," said Tacon, "you will bind the hands of this count Almonte and Miralda Estalez together in the bonds wedlock?"

"Excellencia!" exclaimed the count in amazement.

"Not another word, Sonor; it is your part to obey."

"My nobility, excellencia!"

"Is forfeited!" said Tacon.

Count Almonte had too many evidences before his mind's eye of Tacon's mode of administering justice, and of enforcing his own will, to dare to rebel, and he doggedly yielded in silence. Poor Pedro, not daring to speak, was half crazed to see the prize he had so long coveted thus about to be torn from him. In a few moments the ceremony was performed, the trembling and bewildered girl not daring to thwart the governor's orders, and the priest declared them husband and wife. The captain of the guard was summoned and despatched with a written order, and in a few subsequent moments count Almonte, completely subdued and broken spirited, was ordered to return to his plantation. Pedro and Miralda were directed to remain in an adjoining apartment to that which had been the scene of this singular procedure. Count Almonte mounted his horse and with a single attendant soon passed the gates of the city. But hardly had he passed the corner of the Paseo, when a dozen muskets fired a volley upon him, and he fell a corpse upon the road.

His body was quietly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, made a minute upon his order as to the time and place, and, mounting his horse, rode to the governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more summoned before the governor.

"Excellencia," said the officer, returning the order, "it is executed!"

"Is the count dead?"

"Excellencia, yes."

"Proclaim in the usual manner, the marriage of count Almonte and Miralda Estalez, and also that she is his legal widow, possessress of his titles and estates. See that a proper officer attends her to the count's estate, and enforces this decision. Then turning to Pedro Mantanez, he said, "No man or woman in this island is so humble, but that they may claim justice from Tacon!"

This story furnishes its own moral.

Some time last March, if my memory serves me, the Washington Union announced the New Hampshire election with the exuberant flourish of: "Behold, how brightly breaks the morning!" A correspondent wishes us respectfully to inquire of the Union whether the morning which so brightly dawned upon its dazzled vision still shines, or whether it was not somewhat in the condition of the young sluggard who, when reminded by his more wakeful companion that day was breaking, gruffly responded, let the concern break, it don't owe me anything!—Boston Atlas.

The reduction in size of the New York Tribune, making the paper on which it is printed cost a dollar less a ream, effects a saving on its aggregate circulation of about six hundred dollars per week, or thirty-one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

The Say-Nothings have made a clean sweep in Louisville. The Courier of the 9th says: "Among the many results of the election, it was a note-worthy fact that all the candidates who made the most noise and talk were the hindmost in the race and the worst beaten. On the other hand, those who had the least to say, and were almost unknown on the stump, were triumphantly elected."

BOOK ITEMS.

Blackwood for August presents to the lovers of the old fashioned, solid style of quarterly, the usual attractive bill of fare. A capital letter on "the Insurrection of Spain," and a chapter on "Student life in Scotland," will be most interesting to the general reader, while the more philosophically inclined will find ample opportunity for careful reading in the article on "the Ethnology of Europe."

The Edinburgh Review for this month possesses more than ordinary attraction to the politician, treating as it does, in several articles, well written and independent, the "Eastern question." A fine toned and appreciative article on "Eschylus" will be read with interest by those who retain their interest in "the classics."

The North British Review offers a choice collection, among the most interesting of which, we notice a general review of Vinet's writings, and of several translations from Dante.

Our reading public are offered a fair opportunity to keep posted on the current literature of our trans-Atlantic friends in these reviews, and the very cheap rate at which they are afforded, places them within the reach of all.

We learn that Dr. Hoyt, of St. Croix, was nominated at Mineral Point, and that full-blooded Nebraska resolutions were adopted.

The Iowa Election.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, dated August 26th, gives revised returns of the members elect to the legislature. They sum up:

Anti-Nebraska. Dodge & Douglas. Senate.....16 House.....41

Joint Ballot.....57

One senator, (from Polk, &c.) to be heard from; one tie in the house, (from Scott county.) We understand that some of the members classed as anti-Nebraska, are not whigs.

The same letter gives us returns for congress from all the counties in the southern district but eight very new ones, which foot up majorities in ten counties for Clark.....1,538 majorities in seventeen counties for Hall.....1,390

R. L. B. Clark (anti-Douglas) ahead.....148

The counties to be heard from are Adair, Audubon, Montgomery, Page, Ringgold, Taylor, Union and Wayne, only three of which were organized in '52, when those three gave Scott 95, and Pierce 108 votes. The correspondent thinks they all cannot now have given over fifty majority either way, and that Clark is consequently elected.—Chicago Tribune.

The Dubuque Express, of August 30th, states that a letter had been received from the auditor of the state, asserting that the returns in his office showed the election of Mr. Hall, and gave the senate to the Nebraska and Dodge party by one majority. We have seen this statement nowhere else and do not know what credit to attach to it.

We find in the Galena Jeffersonian a fuller account of the stabbing affray at Hazel Green than we have before published. The Jeffersonian says:

Most of the filthy and degraded denizens of the "Cotton Farm," and other places of that like, in the vicinity of Galena, leave the country during the sittings of the grand jury. A few days ago in anticipation of this event, thirteen women and seven men went out to Jefferson, in the neighborhood of Hazel Green, in a spot beyond the jurisdiction of an Illinois court, and where they could for a time pursue—both pimps and panders—their calling, without interruption by the officers of the law. Among them was a man named Young and his drab, who endeavored to rent a room in Hazel Green, from a grocery keeper, a blind man, named Flinn.—His wife objected, and Young commenced abusing her for her scruples in a violent and ruffianly manner. At this moment a respectable old man, James Field, happened along and remonstrated with Young in an angry tone for his treatment of the woman. Young after a little altercation, rushed upon him and stabbed him so severely that his recovery is a matter of doubt. Young was arrested, and after an examination, sent to the county jail at Lancaster.

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the Green to take the matter of the woman and the "men" into consideration, and to devise the best means of ridding the neighborhood of their dangerous and disagreeable presence.—The result we have not heard.

BELOIT DISTRICT CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the Republicans of Beloit, Turtle and Clinton, held pursuant to a call from the county convention of Rock county to those opposed to the Nebraska inquiry, Dr. A. I. BENNETT was called to the chair, L. G. FISHER was elected vice president, and J. A. BREWSTER, secretary. The call for the meeting having been read, on motion, Dr. A. I. BENNETT and S. G. COLLEY were elected delegates to represent this district in the congressional convention called at Mineral Point, on the 13th of September. C. L. MARTIN and J. N. REYNOLDS were elected vice-delegates. It was voted that one committeeman be appointed from each town in this district as a vigilance committee. JOHN BANNISTER was appointed for Beloit, L. P. HARVEY for Turtle, THOMAS TUTTLE for Clinton. It was unanimously resolved, That we heartily endorse and cheerfully adopt the platform enacted by the people of Wisconsin, on the 13th of July last; and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure and maintain the principles therein proclaimed.

After listening to some remarks by L. P. HARVEY and others, and voting that the county papers be requested to publish the proceedings of the meeting, on motion the convention adjourned. A. I. BENNETT, Pres't. L. G. FISHER, Vice Pres't. J. A. BREWSTER, Sec'y.

The city authorities of Boston have decreed, that all the names of non-residents who come to Boston and get drunk, and are re-arrested, shall be published.

MASS CONVENTION AT ROCKFORD.—The proceedings of the mass republican meeting at Rockford, held last Wednesday, will be found in this paper. The resolutions to support for office only such men as are true friends of rational freedom, and to unite cordially with others in the support of such in the coming elections, are right to the point, and they TELL. Freemen must vote like freemen, or they must expect to be treated like slaves by the very men whom they pamper and puff up. And when a great wrong has been perpetrated, against all justice, good faith and honor, as was the case in the repeal of the Missouri compromise, it is time for MANHOOD to show itself in dignified, direct and manly acts. If it is a question with any, whether the governing power in this country rests in the hands of a comparatively few unprincipled political sharpers, or in the breasts of an honest and high principled people, it is time that all doubt should be removed from the minds of all on that point; and we hail the spirit of the Rockford convention as the sure harbinger for good to this end, for it is not only proposed, but it took one step toward a thorough solution of the question in the nomination of Mr. Washburne for congress. The vital point, however, in the whole matter is the voting, yet to take place.—The convention did perfectly right in abjuring all party ties, whenever they stand in the way of carrying of just measures through the efficient support of just men. This was all we asked of the free soil party in 1844—it was all we asked in '48 and '52. IT IS ALL WE ASK NOW.—Galena Gazette.

The New York Tribune copies the statement of Judge Wording, of Racine, of his interview with Gen. Pierce in Concord, preceding the presidential election, and says:

This is all plain and clear, and it shows that Gen. Pierce held very different opinions before election from those which have since been illustrated by his public career. This is not surprising, since then he was anxious to get votes, and was no doubt ready to be all things to all men. Besides, it has never been suspected that fidelity to his personal word was one of the president's characteristics. Thus he promised the French mission to Gen. Dix, but didn't keep the pledge; he promised the Albany post-office to Mr. Johnson, of the Albany Argus, and appointed another man; he promised the place of district attorney to Mr. T. R. Westbrook, in consideration of his vote for the Nebraska bill, and appointed John McKeon, a bitter enemy of his administration, while Westbrook was one of its most unscrupulous and venal friends. We might go on and name other instances without number in which Gen. Pierce has failed to keep his word. In a gentleman this is regarded as a serious failing, but in a president and a democrat it is probably of little consequence. It is even generally believed that before Mr. Douglas embarked in his famous Nebraska speculation, he procured the adherence to it of Gen. Pierce in writing, not thinking it safe to trust any verbal pledges of that distinguished, but weak and slippery functionary. From these simple facts, Judge Wording and the western gentlemen who, like him, were humbugged previous to the election of 1852, may see that they are not treated by Gen. Pierce any worse than others, and that they have no particular reason to complain that they have been taken in by him. When a man is served no more shabbily than his neighbors, he ought not to grumble as being specially ill-treated.

THE RAILROAD.—We learn by a gentleman who has been in company with the Messrs. Clinton and Peck of the M. & M. R. Co., who are now engaged in the several towns holding meetings, explaining the plan of the company, and taking mortgages for stock in the road, that some over $160,000 of stock has been taken and but four towns as yet been visited by the agents. It is now the expectation that a sufficient amount of stock will be taken during the week, to complete the consolidation—and this will warrant the purchase of the iron for the road as far as to Monroe—which will be effected immediately by Mr. Holton, who is now in New York on business connected with the road. There will be an opportunity to take stock at Monroe during this week.—Monroe Sentinel, 6th inst.

CHANGES IN STOCKS.—The New York Journal of Commerce of Sat. day publishes the following incident, showing what changes are effected in stocks by apparently trifling occurrences:

"An illustration of the feverishness which characterizes the market was given at the first board. Just at the first call it was announced that commodore Vanderbilt had been thrown from a carriage in Broadway, and severely injured. Erie at once declined, and why? Was not the commodore to lend \$100,000 to Erie, and if he was injured might he not die! And if he died might not the loan fail? But lo! just at the second call, it was ascertained that it was not the commodore, but Capt. S. Vanderbilt who was injured. Erie at once recovered and sold at 35 $\frac{1}{2}$. These changes would be simply ridiculous, if upon such trifles did not hang the pecuniary fortunes of the operators."

The gentlest task master we ever knew of, is a blacksmith, who says, every evening to his apprentices—"come boys, let's leave off work and go to sewing wood." This blacksmith must be a brother of a farmer down east, who one season when he was building a new house, used to try and get his hired men out with him to play dig cellar by moonlight.

MOVEMENT AMONG RAILROAD MEN.—The superintendents and officers of different western railroad companies held a meeting at Chicago a few days since, for a similar purpose to that of the recent eastern railroad convention. They passed various resolutions with a view to economy in their business, which they express their determination to practically test.

Col. Baylie Peyton, the chairman of the whig state committee, of California, in a speech before the state convention, said the "Nebraska bill was one of the veriest humbugs ever introduced into Congress." This does not look as if the whigs of that state had endorsed the swindle as some of the democratic papers assert.

The circuit court for Greene county is now in session in this village, Judge Doolittle presiding. We learn that there is considerable business before the court.—Monroe Sentinel.

If incivility proceeds from pride, it deserves to be hated; if from brutishness, it is only contemptible.

TACON'S JUSTICE.

A STORY OF CUBA.

[Ballou, in his valuable "History of Cuba," devotes a considerable space to the administration of Tacon, who has left rather a doubtful reputation in Havana, his energy in effecting improvements having been combined with such a degree of violence that to the people at large he was an object of terror, rather than of gratitude. In accomplishing his purposes, life was counted of little value, and many of the first people were sacrificed to his unscrupulous zeal. The following story, which was related to the author in Havana, illustrates his romantic love of justice:—]

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his class in intelligence, appearance and associations, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and loved the beautiful Miralda with an ardent romantic in his fidelity and truth. He was a sort of leader among the boatmen in the harbor by reason of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick-witted sagacity was often turned for the benefit of his comrades. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor since a boy, for he had followed his calling of waterman from boyhood, as his fathers had done before him. Miralda in turn dearly loved Pedro; and when he came at night and sat in the back part of her little shop, she had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his lips. Now and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would build a tiny sail in the prow of his boat and securing the little stern awning over Miralda's head, steer out into the gulf and coast along the romantic shore.

There was a famous rose, well known at this time in Havana, named Count Almante, who had frequently visited Miralda's shop and conceived quite a passion for the girl, and, indeed, he had grown to be one of her most liberal customers. With a cunning shrewdness and knowledge of human nature, the count besieged the heart of his intended victim without appearing to do so, and carried on his plan of operations for many weeks before the innocent girl even suspected his possessing a partiality for her, until one day she was surprised by a present from him of so rare and costly a nature as to lead her to suspect the donor's intention at once, and to promptly decline the offered gift. Undismayed by this, still the count continued his profuse patronage in a way to which Miralda could find no plausible pretext of complaint.

At last, seizing upon what he considered a favorable moment, Count Almante declared his passion to Miralda, besought her to come and be the mistress of his broad and rich estates at Cerro near the city, and offered all the promises of wealth, favor and fortune; but in vain. The pure minded girl scorned his offer, and bade him never more insult her by visiting her shop. Abashed but not confounded, the count retired, but only to weave a new snare whereby he could entangle her, for he was not one to be so easily thwarted.

One afternoon not long after this, as the twilight was settling over the town, a file of soldiers halted just opposite the door of the little cigar-shop, when a young man, wearing a lieutenant's insignia, entered and asked the attendant if her name was Miralda Estalez, to which she promptly responded.

"Then you will please to come with me."

"By what authority?" asked the trembling girl.

"The order of the governor-general."

"Then I must obey you," she answered, and prepared to follow him at once.

Stepping to the door with her, the young officer directed his men to march on; and, getting into a volute, told Miralda they would drive to the guard house. But, to the surprise of the girl, she soon after discovered that they were rapidly passing the city gates, and immediately after were dashing off on the road to Cerro. Then it was that she began to fear some trick had been played upon her; and these fears were soon confirmed by the volute's turning down the long alley of palms that led to the estate of Count Almante. It was in vain to expostulate now; she felt that she was in the power of that reckless nobleman, and the pretended officer and soldiers were his own people, who had adopted the disguise of the Spanish army uniform.

Count Almante met her at the door, told her to fear no violence, that her wishes should be respected in all things, save her personal liberty; that he trusted in time, to persuade her to look more favorably upon him, and that in all things he was her slave. She replied contemptuously to his words, and charged him with the cowardly trick by which he had gained control of her liberty. But she was left by herself, though watched by his orders at all times to prevent her escape.

She knew very well that the power and will of Count Almante were too strong for any humble friend of hers to attempt to thwart; and yet she somehow felt a conscious strength in Pedro, and secretly cherished the idea that he would discover her place of confinement, and adopt some means to deliver her. The slatito in the constant companionship of the lower class, and Miralda had been used to wear one even in her store against contingency; but she now regarded the tiny weapon with peculiar satisfaction, and slept with it in her bosom!

Small was the clue by which Pedro Mantuena discovered the trick of Count Almante. First this was found out, then that circumstance, and these, being put together, they led to other results, until the indefatigable lover was at last fully satisfied that he had discovered her place of confinement. Disguised as a friar of the order of San Fulip, he sought Count Almante's gates at a favorable moment, met Miralda, cheered her with fresh hopes, and retired to arrange some certain plan for her delivery. There was time to think now; heretofore he had not permitted himself even an hour's sleep; but she was safe,—that is, not in immediate danger,—and he could breathe more freely. He knew not with whom to advise; he feared to speak with those above him in society, lest they might betray his purpose to the count, and his own liberty, by some means, be thus jeopardized. He could consider with no one but himself; he must be his own counsellor in this critical case.

At last, as if in despair, he started to his feet one day, and exclaimed to himself, "Why not go to head quarters at once? why not see the governor-general and tell him the whole truth? Ah! see him!—how is that to be effected?—And then this Count Almante is a nobleman! They say Tacon loves justice. We shall see. I will go to the governor-general; it cannot do any harm, if it does not do any good. I can but try." And Pedro did seek the governor. True, he did not at once get audience of him—not the first, second, nor the third time; but he persevered, and was admitted at last. Here he told his story in a free, manly voice, undisguisedly and openly in all things, so that Tacon was pleased.

"And the girl," asked the governor-general, over whose countenance a dark scowl had gathered, "is she thy sister?"

"No, Excellencia, she is dearer still; she is my betrothed."

The governor, bidding him come nearer, took a golden cross from his table, and handing it to the boatman, as he regarded him searchingly, said:

"I swear that what you have related to me is true, as you hope for heaven!"

"I swear," said Pedro, kneeling and kissing the emblem with simple reverence.

The governor turned to his table, wrote a few brief lines, and touching a bell, summoned a page from an adjoining room, whom he ordered to send the captain of the guard to him. Prompt as were all who had any connection with the governor's household, the officer appeared at once, and received the written order, with directions to bring count Almante and a young girl named Miralda immediately before him.

Pedro was sent to an ante-room, and the business of the day passed on as usual in the reception hall of the governor.

Less than two hours had transpired when the count and Miralda stood before Tacon. Neither knew the nature of the business which had summoned them there. Almante half suspected the truth, and the poor girl argued to herself that her fate could not be improved by the interference, let its nature be what it might.

"Count Almante, you doubtless know why I have ordered you to appear."

"Excellencia, I fear that I have been indiscreet," was the reply.

"You adopted the uniform of the guards for your own private purposes upon this young girl, did you not?"

"Excellencia, I cannot deny it."

"Declare, upon your honor, count Almante, whether she is unmarried whom you have thus kept a prisoner."

"Excellencia, she is as pure as when she entered beneath my roof," was the truthful reply.

The governor turned, and whispered something to his page, then continued his questions to the count, while he made some minutes upon paper. Pedro was now summoned to explain some matter, and as he entered, the governor general turned his back for one moment as if to seek for some papers upon his table, while Miralda was pressed into the boatman's arms.

It was but for a moment, and the next, Pedro was bowing humbly before Tacon. A few moments more and the governor's page returned, accompanied by a monk of the church of Santa Clara, with the emblems of his office.

"Holy father," said Tacon, "you will bind the hands of this count Almante and Miralda Estalez together in the bonds wedlock?"

"Excellencia!" exclaimed the count in amazement.

"Not another word, Sonor; it is your part to obey?"

"My nobility, excellencia!"

"Is forfeited!" said Tacon.

Count Almante had too many evidences before his mind's eye of Tacon's mode of administering justice and of enforcing his own will, to dare to rebel, and he doggedly yielded silence. Poor Pedro, not daring to speak, was half crazed to see the prize he had so long coveted thus about to be torn from him. In a few moments the ceremony was performed, the trembling and bewildered girl not daring to thwart the governor's orders, and the priest declared them husband and wife. The captain of the guard was summoned and despatched with a written order, and in a few subsequent moments count Almante, completely subdued and broken spirited, was ordered to return to his plantation. Pedro and Miralda were directed to remain in an adjoining apartment to that which had been the scene of this singular procedure. Count Almante mounted his horse and with a single attendant soon passed the gates of the city. But hardly had he passed the corner of the Paseo, when a dozen muskets fired a volley upon him, and he fell a corpse upon the road.

His body was quietly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, made a minute upon his order as to the time and place, and, mounting his horse, rode to the governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more summoned before the governor.

"Excellencia," said the officer, returning the order, "it is executed."

"Is the count dead?"

"Excellencia, yes."

"Proclaim in the usual manner, the marriage of count Almante and Miralda Estalez, and also that she is his legal widow, possess of his titles and estates. See that a proper officer attends her to the count's estate, and enforces this decision. Then turning to Pedro Mantuena, he said, 'No man or woman in this island is so humble but that they may claim justice from Tacon!'"

This story furnishes its own moral.

Some time last March, if my memory serves us, the Washington Union announced the New Hampshire election with the exuberant flourish of "Behold, how brightly breaks the morning!"

A correspondent wishes us respectfully to inquire of the Union whether the morning which so brightly dawned upon its dazzled vision still shines, or whether it was not somewhat in the condition of the young sluggard who, when reminded by his more wakeful companion that day was breaking, gruffly responded, let the concern break, it don't owe me anything!

The reduction in size of the New York Tribune, making the paper on which it is printed cost a dollar less a run, effects a saving on its aggregate circulation of about six hundred dollars per week, or thirty-one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

The Say-Nothings have made a clean sweep in Louisiana. The Courier of the 9th says:

"Among the many results of the election, it was a note-worthy fact that all the candidates who made the most noise and talk were the hidmost in the race and the worst beaten. On the other hand, those who had the least to say, and were almost unknown on the stump, were triumphantly elected."

BOOK ITEMS.

Blackwood for August presents to the lovers of the old fashioned, solid style of quarterly, the usual attractive bill of fare. A capital letter on "the Insurrection of Spain," and a chapter on "Student life in Scotland," will be most interesting to the general reader, while the more philosophically inclined will find ample opportunity for careful reading in the article on "the Ethnology of Europe."

The Edinburgh Review for this month possesses more than ordinary attraction to the politician, treating as it does, in several articles, well written and independent, the "Eastern question." A fine toned and appreciative article on "Æschylus" will be read with interest by those who retain their interest in "the classics."

The North British Review offers a choice collection, among the most interesting of which, we notice a general review of Vinet's writings, and of several translations from Dante.

Our reading public are offered a fair opportunity to keep posted on the current literature of our trans-Atlantic friends in these reviews, and the very cheap rate at which they are afforded, places them within the reach of all.

We learn that Dr. Hoyt, of St. Croix, was nominated at Mineral Point, and that full-blooded Nebraska resolutions were adopted.

The Iowa Election.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, dated August 26th, gives revised returns of the members elect to the legislature. They sum up:

Anti-Nebraska. Dodge & Douglas. Senate.....16.....14 House.....41.....29

Joint Ballot.....67.....43

One senator, (from Peck, &c.) to be heard from; one tie in the house, (from Scott county). We understand that some of the members classed as anti-Nebraska, are not whigs.

The same letter gives us returns for congress from all the counties in the southern district but eight very new ones, which foot up majorities in ten counties for Clark.....1,538 majorities in seventeen counties for Hall.....1,390

R. L. B. Clark (anti-Douglas) ahead.....148

The counties to be heard from are Adair, Audubon, Montgomery, Page, Ringgold, Taylor, Union and Wayne, only three of which were organized in '52, when those three gave Scott 95, and Pierce 108 votes. The correspondent thinks they all cannot now have given over fifty majority either way, and that Clark is consequently elected.—Chicago Tribune.

The Dubuque Express, of August 30th, states that a letter had been received from the auditor of the state, asserting that the returns in his office showed the election of Mr. Hall, and gave the senate to the Nebraska and Dodge party by one majority. We have seen this statement nowhere else and do not know what credit to attach to it.

We find in the Galena Jeffersonian a fuller account of the stabbing affray at Hazel Green than we have before published. The Jeffersonian says:

Most of the filthy and degraded denizens of the "Cotton Farm," and other places of that ilk, in the vicinity of Galena, leave the country during the sittings of the grand jury. A few days ago in anticipation of this event, thirteen women and seven men went out to Jefferson, in the neighborhood of Hazel Green, in a spot beyond the jurisdiction of an Illinois court, and where they could for a time pursue—both pimps and panders—their calling, without interruption by the officers of the law. Among them was a man named Young and his drab, who endeavored to rent a room in Hazel Green, from a grocery keeper, a blind man, named Fling. His wife objected, and Young commenced abusing her for her seruples in a violent and ruffianly manner. At this moment a respectable old man, James Field, happened along and remonstrated with Young in an angry tone for his treatment of the woman. Young after a little altercation, rushed upon him and stabbed him so severely that his recovery is a matter of doubt. Young was arrested, and after an examination, sent to the county jail at Lancaster.

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the Green to take the matter of the woman and the "men" into consideration, and to devise the best means of ridding the neighborhood of their dangerous and disagreeable presence.—The result we have not heard.

BELOIT DISTRICT CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the Republicans of Beloit, Tuttle and Clinton, held pursuant to a call from the county convention of Rock county to those opposed to the Nebraska inquiry, Dr. A. I. BENNETT was called to the chair. L. G. FISHER was elected vice president, and J. A. BREWSTER, secretary. The call for the meeting having been read, on motion, Dr. A. I. BENNETT and S. G. COLLEY were elected delegates to represent this district in the congressional convention called at Mineral point, on the 13th of September. C. L. MARTIN and J. N. REYNOLDS were elected vice-delegates. It was voted that one committeeman be appointed from each town in this district as a vigilance committee. JOHN BANNISTER was appointed for Beloit. L. P. HARVEY for Tuttle, THOMAS TUTTLE for Clinton. It was unanimously

Resolved, That we heartily endorse and cheerfully adopt the platform enacted by the people of Wisconsin, on the 13th of July last; and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure and maintain the principles therein proclaimed.

After listening to some remarks by L. P. Harvey and others, and voting that the county papers be requested to publish the proceedings of the meeting, on motion the convention adjourned.

A. I. BENNETT, Pres't.

L. G. FISHER, Vice Pres't.

J. A. BREWSTER, Sec'y.

The city authorities of Boston have decreed, that all the names of non-residents who come to Boston and get drunk, and are re-arrested, shall be published.

MASS CONVENTION AT ROCKFORD.—The proceedings of the mass republican meeting at Rockford, held last Wednesday, will be found in this paper. The resolutions to support for office only such men as are true friends of rational freedom, and to unite cordially with others in the support of such in the coming elections, are right to the point, and will tell. Freemen must vote like freemen, or they must expect to be treated like slaves by the very men whom they pamper and puff up. And when a great wrong has been perpetrated, against all justice, good faith and honor, as was the case in the repeal of the Missouri compromise, it is time for MANHOOD to show itself in dignified, direct and manly acts. If it is a question with any, whether the governing power in this country rests in the hands of a comparatively few unprincipled political sharpshooters, or in the breasts of an honest and high principled people, it is time that all doubt should be removed from the minds of all on that point; and we hail the spirit of the Rockford convention as the sure harbinger for good to this end, for it is not only proposed, but it took one step toward a thorough solution of the question in the nomination of Mr. Washburne for congress. The vital point, however, in the whole matter is the voting, yet to take place. The convention did perfectly right in abjuring all party ties, whenever they stand in the way of carrying of just measures through the efficient support of just men. This was all we asked of the free soil party in 1844—it was all we asked in '48 and '52. IT IS ALL WE ASK NOW.—Galena Gazette.

The New York Tribune copies the statement of Judge Wording, of Racine, of his interview with Gen. Pierce in Concord, preceding the presidential election, and says: This is all plain and clear, and it shows that Gen. Pierce held very different opinions before election from those which have since been illustrated by his public career. This is not surprising, since then he was anxious to get votes, and was no doubt ready to be all things to all men. Besides, it has never been suspected that fidelity to his personal word was one of the president's characteristics. Thus he promised the French mission to Gen. Dix, but didn't keep the pledge; he promised the Albany post-office to Mr. Johnson, of the Albany Argus, and appointed another man; he promised the place of district attorney to Mr. T. R. Westbrook, in consideration of his vote for the Nebraska bill, and appointed John McKeon, a bitter enemy of his administration, while Westbrook was one of its most unscrupulous and venal friends. We might go on and name other instances without number in which Gen. Pierce has failed to keep his word. In a gentleman this is regarded as a serious failing, but in a president and a democrat it is probably of little consequence. It is even generally believed that before Mr. Douglas embarked in his famous Nebraska speculation, he procured the adherence to it of Gen. Pierce in writing, not thinking it safe to trust any verbal pledges of that distinguished, but weak and slippery functionary. From these simple facts, Judge Wording and the western gentlemen who, like him, were lumbaggued previous to the election of 1852, may see that they are not treated by Gen. Pierce any worse than others, and that they have no particular reason to complain that they have been taken in by him. When a man is served no more shabbily than his neighbors, he ought not to grumble as being specially ill-treated.

THE RAILROAD.—We learn by a gentleman who has been in company with the Messrs. Clinton and Peck of the M. & M. R. R. Co., who are now engaged in the several towns holding meetings, explaining the plan of the company, and taking mortgages for stock in the road, that some over $160,000 of stock has been taken and but four towns as yet been visited by the agents. It is now the expectation that a sufficient amount of stock will be taken during the week, to complete the consolidation—and this will warrant the purchase of the iron for the road as far as to Monroe—which will be effected immediately by Mr. Holton, who is now in New York on business connected with the road. There will be an opportunity to take stock at Monroe during this week.—Monroe Sentinel, 6th inst.

CHANGES IN STOCKS.—The New York Journal of Commerce of Saturday publishes the following incident, showing what changes are effected in stocks by apparently trifling occurrences: "An illustration of the futility of the market was given at the first board. Just at the first call it was announced that commodore Vanderbilt had been thrown from a carriage in Broadway, and severely injured. Erie at once declined, and why? Was not the commodore to lend $100,000 to Erie, and if he was injured might he not die! And if he died might not the loan fail? But lo! just at the second call, it was ascertained that it was not the commodore, but Capt. S. Vanderbilt who was injured. Erie at once recovered and sold at 35. These changes would be simply ridiculous, if upon such trifles did not hang the pecuniary fortunes of the operators.

The gentlest task master we ever knew of, is a blacksmith, who says, every evening to his apprentices—"Come boys, let's leave off work and go to sawing wood." This blacksmith must be a brother of a farmer down east, who one season when he was building a new house, used to try and get his hired men out with him to play dig cellar by moonlight.

MOVEMENT AMONG RAILROAD MEN.—The superintendents and officers of different western railroad companies held a meeting at Chicago a few days since, for a similar purpose to that of the recent eastern railroad convention. They passed various resolutions with a view to economy in their business, which they express their determination to practically test.

Col. Baylie Peyton, the chairman of the whig state committee, of California, in a speech before the state convention, said the "Nebraska bill was one of the veriest humbugs ever introduced into Congress." This does not look as if the whigs of that state had endorsed the swindle as some of the democratic papers assert.

The circuit court for Greene county is now in session in this village, Judge Doolittle presiding. We learn that there is considerable business before the court.—Monroe Sentinel.

If incivility proceeds from pride, it deserves to be hated; if from brutishness, it is only contemptible.

KIER'S ROCK OIL,

FROM A Well 400 feet deep, Near Pittsburgh,

Pa., is offered to the public as a Natural Medicine of the highest quality, and of great value in the treatment of all kinds of Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Headache, &c. &c. It is also a valuable remedy in the treatment of all kinds of Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Sciatica, Rheumatism,

Headache, &c. &c. It is also a valuable remedy in the treatment of all kinds of Rheumatism, Gout,

&c. &c. It is also a valuable remedy in the treatment of all kinds of Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Headache, &c. &c.

Discovered in 1849, it has within 2 or 3 years, made multitudes of cures, and multitudes of friends—and as soon as tried the Sales not only increase but hold out testimony to its great merit as a constantly accumulating in the hands of the proprietor by certificates, letters, and in other ways.

IT DOCTORS THE WHOLE MAN—flesh and blood—skin and bones—from head to foot—how it sets upon the system—upon diseases of different manifestations, we cannot fully tell. While it is both cathartic and astringent, it is Alterative—and mind you, a REGULA-TOR. A leading principle in it is Naphtha. When you take it in the family you will not be without it.

Full as the world is of Patent Medicines—it is thought not best to suppress this, the work of NATURE—to make room for Human Inventions. Price 50 cents per bottle. It can be had of all wholesale and retail drugstores.

HAVE WE AGUE AMONG US?—A tea spoonful every three hours in the absence of the fever will cure you of Ague or Malaria. 25¢ Physicians, Druggists, and all friends of the afflicted will do well to recommend this Oil for PROLAPSUS UTERI, and good will be done —take the Oil once 2 or 3 times a day, and bathe the lower part of the back with it. Have you SCROFULA?
The Petroleum will eradicate it, root and branch, at little cost or inconvenience. Get circulars of directions for adults and children, gratis of the agents. A trial is all we ask. Mind and get the right kind—it is of a beautiful reddish color and clear for the Files.

AGREAT MISTAKE.

J. B. CROSBY & CO.

HAVE just returned from New York and have purchased a large stock of Merchandise which they will not refuse to store them, and to resely this, they have concluded to mark their goods down at

A TRIFLE ABOVE COST,

which will crowd their store with customers and ensure large and heavy sales, thus making room for goods yet to arrive. Ladies and Gentlemen,

THIS IS NO HUMBU J,

but a REALITY, and to be convinced of this fact personally, look through their immense stock, see the amount of goods they have in store, (and but a portion of their stock has yet arrived,) enquire the price, and you will acknowledge that we will sell you

GOOD GOODS, at nearly half the Price, that other Merchants charge. We shall not mention a few leading articles and their prices, and sell the balance of stock at a low rate, as other Merchants do, but shall mark our whole stock at a small regular profit, and adhere strictly to the

ONE PRICE SYSTEM.

Our stock consists of STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, CROCKERY, BOOTS AND SHOES, HATS, CAPS, CARPETS, OIL CLOTHS, READY-MADE CLOTHING, &c. &c., to which we invite special attention, as to quality and price, as we are determined that

Every Sale shall give Full and Perfect

Satisfaction.

Auction or shop worn goods which are not cheap a any price we do not deal in; but buy only the best grade of goods, and of the latest styles. We are the only House in Janesville that do a strictly cash business, and buying of importers and wholly for cash, we

CAN AND WILL SELL

CHEAPER AND BETTER GOODS,

than those who buy small stocks on time, and sell them the same way.

To Country Merchants,

We would say, that we will sell you goods at New York and Best prices, adding freight. You will find us at the old stand of J. B. CROSBY two doors above the Post Office.

Capital and accumulation, $650,000.

THIS Company is one of the oldest, and among the most prudently and successfully conducted in the country. The primary object in conducting its business is to provide perfect security to its policyholders, and to return to the insured the surplus at stated periods, and strict economy is observed.

Every insured person is a member of the company and shares in the profits of the business, and is subject to no liability or assessments beyond its premium. The directors are required to be peculiarly interested in the company, and they give their personal attention and funds of sufficient security are given by its officers for the faithful performance of their duties. Insurance may be effected for the benefit of the wife, which is secured to her by law beyond the reach of a husband's creditors; and creditors may insure the lives of debtors.

Highly Important to Farmers.
THE ONLY EXCLUSIVE FARMERS' INSURANCE COMPANY IN THE WEST.

THE MADISON MUTUAL,
LOCATED AT MADISON, WISCONSIN.

THIS Company continues to take risks upon
Farm Property only, consisting of buildings of all kinds, (belonging to farmers,) household furniture, grain in bins, Hay stacks, &c., from one to five years, at lower rates than most other responsible companies.

All losses promptly paid at the office as soon as proof is made thereon.

We believe it to be for the interest of the farmers to insure by themselves, their property being less hazardous than any other, consequently you will have no losses upon your own of the same class, and all will be on an equal footing.

Every insured person has two-thirds, if not three-fourths of all the fires that occur are upon stores, taverns, mills, shops and such like property. In this company all such property is rejected positively, by LAWYERS' VERDICT.

Farmers, look to your own interest, and insure in a Farmers' Company.

We have been doing business a little over three years, and we have not been obliged to assess our premium notes, and for this best of reasons, we have never had a single dollar loss, though doing a large and prosperous business, which we believe to be without a parallel in the history of Insurance.

of the company.

TACON'S JUSTICE.

A STORY OF CUBA.

[Ballot, in his valuable "History of Cuba," devotes a considerable space to the administration of Tacon, who has left rather a doubtful reputation in Havana, his energy in effecting improvements having been combined with such a degree of violence that to the people at large he was an object of terror, rather than of gratitude. In accomplishing his purposes, life was counted of little value, and many of the first people were sacrificed to his unscrupulous zeal. The following story, which was related to the author in Havana, illustrates his romantic love of justice.]

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his class in intelligence, appearance and associations, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and loved the beautiful Miralda with an ardent romantic in its fidelity and truth. He was a sort of leader among the boatmen in the harbor by reason of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick-witted sagacity was often turned for the benefit of his comrades. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor since a boy, for he had followed his calling of waterman from boyhood, as his fathers had done before him. Miralda in turn ardently loved Pedro; and when he came at night and sat in the back part of her little shop, she had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his lips. Now and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would hoist a tiny sail in the prow of his boat and securing the little stern away over Miralda's head, steer out into the gulf and coast along the romantic shore.

There was a famous ruse, well known at this time in Havana, named Count Almonte, who had frequently visited Miralda's shop and conceived quite a passion for the girl, and, indeed, he had grown to be one of her most liberal customers. With a cunning shrewdness and knowledge of human nature, the count besieged the heart of his intended victim without appearing to do so, and carried on his plan of operations for many weeks before the innocent girl even suspected his possessing a partiality for her; until one day she was surprised by a present from him of so rare and costly a nature as to lead her to suspect the donor's intention at once, and to promptly decline the offered gift. Undismayed by this, still the count continued his profuse patronage in a way to which Miralda could find no plausible pretext of complaint.

At last, seizing upon what he considered a favorable moment, Count Almonte declared his passion to Miralda, besought her to come and be the mistress of his broad and rich estates at Cerito near the city, and offered all the promises of wealth, favor and fortune; but in vain. The pure-minded girl scorned his offer, and bade him never more insult her by visiting her shop. Ashamed but not confounded, the count retired, but only to weave a new snare whereby he could entangle her, for he was not one to be so easily thwarted.

One afternoon not long after this, as the twilight was settling over the town, a file of soldiers halted just opposite the door of the little cigar-shop, when a young man, wearing a lieutenant's insignia, entered and asked the attendant if her name was Miralda Estalez, to which she timidly responded.

"Then you will please to come with me."

"By what authority?" asked the trembling girl.

"The order of the governor-general."

"Then I must obey you," she answered, and prepared to follow him at once.

Stepping to the door with her, the young officer directed his men to march on; and, getting into a volante, told Miralda they would drive to the guard house. But, to the surprise of the girl, she soon after discovered that they were rapidly passing the city gates, and immediately after were dashing off on the road to Cerito. Then it was that she began to fear some trick had been played upon her; and these fears were soon confirmed by the volante's turning down the long alley of palms that led to the estate of Count Almonte. It was in vain to expostulate now; she felt that she was in the power of an officer and soldiers more his own people, who had adopted the disguise of the Spanish army uniform.

Count Almonte met her at the door, told her to fear no violence, that her wishes should be respected in all things, save her personal liberty; that he trusted in time to persuade her to look more favorably upon him, and that in all things he was her slave. She replied contemptuously to his words, and charged him with the cowardly trick by which he had gained control of her liberty. But she was left by herself, though watched by his orders at all times to prevent her escape.

She knew very well that the power and will of Count Almonte were too strong for any humble friend of hers to attempt to thwart; and yet she somehow felt a conscious strength in Pedro, and secretly cherished the idea that he would discover her place of confinement, and adopt some means to deliver her. The suite to the constant companion of the lower class, and Miralda had been used to wear one even in her store against contingency; but she now regarded the tiny woman with peculiar satisfaction, and slept with it in her bosom.

Small was the clue by which Pedro Mantanez discovered the trick of Count Almonte. First this was found out, then that circumstance, and these, being put together, they led to other results, until the indefatigable lover was fully satisfied that he had discovered her place of confinement. Disguised as a friar of the order of San Felipe, he sought Count Almonte's gates at a favorable moment, met Miralda, cheered her with fresh hopes, and retired to arrange some certain plan for her delivery. There was time to think now; heretofore he had not permitted himself even an hour's sleep; but she was safe,—that is, not in immediate danger,—and he could breathe more freely. He knew not with whom to advise; he feared to speak with those above him in society, lest they might betray his purpose to the count, and his own liberty, by some means, be thus jeopardized. He could consider with no one but himself; he must be his own counsellor in this critical case.

At last, as if in despair, he started to his feet one day, and exclaimed to himself, "Why not go to head quarters at once? why not see the governor-general and tell him the whole truth? Ah! see him?—how is that to be effected? And then this Count Almonte is a nobleman! They say Tacon loves justice. We shall see. I will go to the governor-general; it cannot do any harm, if it does not do any good. I can but try." And Pedro did seek the governor.

True, he did not at once get audience of him,—not the first, second, nor the third time; but he persevered, and was admitted at last. Then he told his story in a free, manly voice, undisguisedly and openly in all things, so that Tacon was pleased.

"And the girl," asked the governor-general, over whose countenance a dark scowl had gathered, "is she thy sister?"

"No, Excellencia, she is dearer still; she is my betrothed."

The governor, bidding him come nearer, took a golden cross from his table, and handing it to the boatman, as he regarded him searchingly, said:

"I swear that what you have related to me is true, as you hope for heaven!"

"I swear!" said Pedro, kneeling and kissing the emblem with simple reverence.

The governor turned to his table, wrote a few brief lines, and touching a bell, summoned a page from an adjoining room, whom he ordered to send the captain of the guard to him. Prompts were all who had any connection with the governor's household, the officer appeared at once, and received the written order, with directions to bring count Almonte and a young girl named Miralda immediately before him. Pedro was sent to an ante-room, and the business of the day passed on as usual in the reception hall of the governor.

Less than two hours had transpired when the count and Miralda stood before Tacon. Neither knew the nature of the business which had summoned them there. Almonte half suspected the truth, and the poor girl argued to herself that her fate could not be improved by the interference, let its nature be what it might.

"Count Almonte, you doubtless know why I have ordered you to appear."

"Excellencia, I fear that I have been indiscreet," was the reply.

"You adopted the uniform of the guards for your own private purposes upon this young girl, did you not?"

"Excellencia, I cannot deny it."

"Declare, upon your honor, count Almonte, whether she is unmarried whom you have thus kept a prisoner."

"Excellencia, she is as pure as when she entered beneath my roof," was the truthful reply.

The governor turned, and whispered something to his page, then continued his questions to the count, while he made some minutes upon paper. Pedro was now summoned to explain some matter, and as he entered, the governor general turned his back for one moment as if to seek for some papers upon his table, while Miralda was pressed into the boatman's arms. It was but for a moment, and the next, Pedro was bowing humbly before Tacon. A few moments more and the governor's page returned, accompanied by a monk of the church of Santa Clara, with the emblems of his office.

"Holy father," said Tacon, "you will bind the hands of this count Almonte and Miralda Estalez together in the bonds wedlock!"

"Excellencia!" exclaimed the count in amazement.

"Not another word, Sonor; it is your part to obey!"

"My nobility, excellencia!"

"Is forfeited!" said Tacon.

Count Almonte had too many evidences before his mind's eye of Tacon's mode of administering justice, and of enforcing his own will, to dare to rebel, and he doggedly yielded in silence. Poor Pedro, not daring to speak, was half carried to see the prize he had so long coveted thus about to be torn from him. In a few moments the ceremony was performed, the trembling and bewildered girl not daring to thwart the governor's orders, and the priest declared them husband and wife. The captain of the guard was summoned and despatched with a written order, and in a few subsequent moments count Almonte, completely subdued and broken spirited, was ordered to return to his plantation. Pedro and Miralda were directed to remain in an adjoining apartment to that which had been the scene of this singular procedure. Count Almonte mounted his horse and with a single attendant soon passed the gates of the city. But hardly had he passed the corner of the Paseo, when a dozen muskets fired a volley upon him, and he fell a corpse upon the road.

His body was quietly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, made a minute upon his order as to the time and place, and, mounting his horse, rode to the governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more summoned before the governor.

"Is the count dead?"

"Excellencia, yes."

"Proceeding in the usual manner, the marriage of count Almonte and Miralda Estalez, and also that she is his legal widow, possessed of his title and estates. See that a proper officer attend her to the count's estate, and enforce this decision. Then turning to Pedro Mantanez, he said, 'No man or woman in this island is so humble, but that they may claim justice from Tacon!'"

This story furnishes its own moral.

Some time last March, if our memory serves us, the Washington Union announced the New Hampshire election with the exuberant flourish of "Behold, how brightly breaks the morning!" A correspondent wishes us respectfully to inquire of the Union whether the morning which so brightly dawned upon its dazzled vision still shines, or whether it was not somewhat in the condition of the young squire who, when reminded by his more wakeful companion that day was breaking, gruffly responded, let the concern break, it don't owe me anything!

The reduction in size of the New York Tribune, making the paper on which it is printed cost a dollar less a ream, effects a saving on its aggregate circulation of about six hundred dollars per week, or thirty-one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

The Say-Notings have made a clean sweep in Louisville. The Courier of the 9th says: "Among the many results of the election, it was a noteworthy fact that all the candidates who made the most noise and talk were the hindmost in the race and the worst beaten. On the other hand, those who had the least to say, and were almost unknown on the stump, were triumphantly elected."

BOOK ITEMS.

Blackwood for August presents to the lovers of the old fashioned, solid style of quarterly, the usual attractive bill of fare. A capital letter on "the Insurrection of Spain," and a chapter on "Student life in Scotland," will be most interesting to the general reader, while the more philosophically inclined will find ample opportunity for careful reading in the article on "the Ethnology of Europe."

The Edinburgh Review for this month possesses more than ordinary attraction to the politician, treating as it does, in several articles, well written and independent, the "Eastern question." A fine toned and appreciative article on "Æschylus" will be read with interest by those who retain their interest in "the classics."

The North British Review offers a choice collection, among the most interesting of which, we notice a general review of Vine's writings, and of several translations from Dante.

Our reading public are offered a fair opportunity to keep posted on the current literature of our trans-Atlantic friends in these reviews, and of very cheap rate at which they are afforded, places them within the reach of all.

We learn that Dr. Hoyt, of St. Croix, was nominated at Mineral Point, and that full-blooded Nebraska resolutions were adopted.

The Iowa Election.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, dated August 26th, gives revised returns of the members elected to the legislature. They sum up:

Anti-Nebraska. Dodge & Douglas. Senate.....16.....14 House.....41.....29

Joint Ballot.....67.....43

One senator, (from Polk, &c.) to be heard from; one tie in the house, (from Scott county.) We understand that some of the members classed as anti-Nebraska, are not whigs.

The same letter gives us returns for congress from all the counties in the southern district but eight very new ones, which foot up majorities in ten counties for Clark.....1,538 majorities in seventeen counties for Hall 1,390

R. L. B. Clark (anti-Douglas) ahead.....148

The counties to be heard from are Adair, Audubon, Montgomery, Page, Ringgold, Taylor, Union and Wayne, only three of which were organized in '52, when those three gave Scott 95, and Pierce 108 votes. The correspondent thinks they all cannot now have given over fifty majority either way, and that Clark is consequently elected.—Chicago Tribune.

The Dubuque Express, of August 30th, states that a letter had been received from the auditor of the state, asserting that the returns in his office showed the election of Mr. Hall, and gave the senate to the Nebraska and Dodge party by one majority. We have seen this statement nowhere else and do not know what credit to attach to it.

We find in the Galena Jeffersonian a fuller account of the stabbing affray at Hazel Green than we have before published. The Jeffersonian says:

Most of the filthy and degraded denizens of the "Cotton Farm," and other places of that like, in the vicinity of Galena, leave the country during the stillings of the grand jury. A few days ago in anticipation of this event, thirteen women and seven men went out to Jefferson, in the neighborhood of Hazel Green, in a spot beyond the jurisdiction of an Illinois court, and where they could for a time pursue—both pimps and panders—their calling, without interruption by the officers of the law. Among them was a man named Young and his drag, who endeavored to rent a room in Hazel Green, from a grocery keeper, a blind man, named Flinn. His wife objected, and Young commenced abusing her for her scruples in a violent and ruffianly manner. At this moment a respectable old man, James Field, happened along and remonstrated with Young in an angry tone for his treatment of the woman. Young after a little altercation, rushed upon him and stabbed him so severely that his recovery is a matter of doubt. Young was arrested, and after an examination, sent to the county jail at Lancaster.

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the Green to take the matter of the woman and the "men" into consideration, and to devise the best means of ridding the neighborhood of their dangerous and disagreeable presence.—The result we have not heard.

BELOIT DISTRICT CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the Republicans of Beloit, Turtle and Clinton, held pursuant to a call from the county convention of Rock county to those opposed to the Nebraska inquiry, Dr. A. I. BENNETT was called to the chair, L. J. FISHER was elected vice president, and J. A. BREWSTER, secretary. The call for the meeting having been read, on motion, Dr. A. I. BENNETT and S. G. COLLEY were elected delegates to represent this district in the congressional convention called at Mineral Point, on the 18th of September. C. L. MARTIN and J. N. REYNOLDS were elected vice-delegates. It was voted that one committeeman be appointed from each town in this district as a vigilance committee. JOHN BANISTER was appointed for Beloit, L. P. HARTY for Turtle, and THOMAS TUTTLE for Clinton. It was unanimously

Resolved, That we heartily endorse and cheerfully adopt the platform enacted by the people of Wisconsin, on the 13th of July last; and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure and maintain the principles therein proclaimed.

After listening to some remarks by L. P. Harvey and others, and voting that the county papers be requested to publish the proceedings of the meeting, on motion the convention adjourned. A. I. BENNETT, Pres't. L. G. FISHER, Vice Pres't. J. A. BREWSTER, Sec'y.

The city authorities of Boston have decreed, that all the names of non-residents who come to Boston and get drunk, and are re-arrested, shall be published.

MASS CONVENTION AT ROCKFORD.—The proceedings of the mass republican meeting at Rockford, held last Wednesday, will be found in this paper. The resolutions to support for office only such men as are true friends of rational freedom, and to unite cordially with others in the support of such in the coming elections, are right to the point, and will tell. Freemen must vote like freemen, or they must expect to be treated like slaves by the very men whom they pamper and puff up. And when a great wrong has been perpetrated, against all justice, good faith and honor, as was the case in the repeal of the Missouri compromise, it is time for MANHOOD to show itself in dignified, direct and manly acts. If it is a question with any, whether the governing power in this country rests in the hands of a comparatively few unprincipled political sharpers, or in the breasts of an honest and high principled people, it is time that all doubt should be removed from the minds of all on that point; and we hail the spirit of the Rockford convention as the sure harbinger for good to this end, for it is not only proposed, but it took one step toward a thorough solution of the question in the nomination of Mr. Washburne for congress. The vital point, however, in the whole matter is the vote, yet to take place.—The convention did perfectly right in adjuring all party ties, whenever they stand in the way of carrying of just measures through the efficient support of just men. This was all we asked of the free soil party in 1844—it was all we asked in '48 and '52. IT IS ALL WE ASK NOW.—Galena Gazette.

The New York Tribune copies the statement of Judge Wording, of Racine, of his interview with Gen. Pierce in Concord, preceding the presidential election, and says:

This is all plain and clear, and it shows that Gen. Pierce held very different opinions before election from those which have since been illustrated by his public career. This is not surprising, since then he was anxious to get votes, and was no doubt ready to be all things to all men. Besides, it has never been suspected that fidelity to his personal word was one of the president's characteristics. Thus he promised the French mission to Gen. Dix, but didn't keep the pledge; he promised the Albany post-office to Mr. Johnson, of the Albany Argus, and appointed another man; he promised the place of district attorney to Mr. T. R. Westbrook, in consideration of his vote for the Nebraska bill, and appointed John McKeon, a bitter enemy of his administration, while Westbrook was one of its most unsuspicious and loyal friends. We might go on and name other instances without number in which Gen. Pierce has failed to keep his word. In a gentleman this is regarded as a serious failing, but in a president and a democrat it is probably of little consequence. It is even generally believed that before Mr. Douglas embarked in his famous Nebraska speculation, he procured the adherence to it of Gen. Pierce in writing, not thinking it safe to trust any verbal pledges of that distinguished, but weak and slippery functionary. From these simple facts, Judge Wording and the western gentlemen who, like him, were humbugged previous to the election of 1852, may see that they are not treated by Gen. Pierce any worse than others, and that they have no particular reason to complain that they have been taken in by him. When a man is served no more shabbily than his neighbors, he ought not to grumble as being specially ill-treated.

THE RAILROAD.—We learn by a gentleman who has been in company with the Messrs. Clinton and Pack of the M. & M. R. Co., who are now engaged in the several towns holding meetings, explaining the plan of the company, and taking mortgages for stock in the road, that some over $180,000 of stock has been taken and but four towns as yet been visited by it. It is now the expectation that a sufficient amount of stock will be taken during the week, to complete the consolidation—and this will warrant the purchase of the iron for the road as far as to Monroe—which will be effected immediately by Mr. Holton, who is now in New York on business connected with the road. There will be an opportunity to take stock at Monroe during this week.—Monroe Sentinel, 6th inst.

CHANGES IN STOCKS.—The New York Journal of Commerce of Saturday publishes the following incident, showing what changes are effected in stocks by apparently trifling occurrences:

"An illustration of the feverishness which characterizes the market was given at the first board. Just at the first call it was announced that commodore Vanderbilt had been thrown from a carriage in Broadway, and severely injured. Erie at once declined, and why? Was not the commodore to lend \$100,000 to Erie, and if he was injured might he not die? But lo! just at the second call, it was ascertained that it was not the commodore, but Capt. S. Vanderbilt who was injured. Erie at once recovered and sold at 35 $\frac{1}{2}$. These changes would be simply ridiculous, if upon such trifles did depend the pecuniary fortunes of the operators.

The gentlest task master we ever knew of, is a blacksmith, who says, every evening to his apprentices, "come boys, let's leave off work and go to sawing wood." The blacksmith must be a brother of a farmer down east, who one season was building a new house, used to try and get his hired men out with him to play dig cellar by moonlight.

MOVEMENT AMONG RAILROAD MEN.—The superintendents and officers of different western railroad companies held a meeting at Chicago a few days since, for a similar purpose to that of the recent eastern railroad convention. They passed various resolutions with a view to economy in their business, which they express their determination to practically test.

Col. Baylie Peyton, the chairman of the whig estate committee, of California, in a speech before the state convention, said the "Nebraska bill was one of the vilest humbugs ever introduced into Congress." This does not look as if the whigs of that state had endorsed the swindle as some of the democratic papers assert.

The circuit court for Greene county is now in session in this village, Judge Doolittle presiding. We learn that there is considerable business before the court.—Monroe Sentinel.

If incivility proceeds from pride, it deserves to be hated; if from brutishness, it is only contemptible.

A STORE FOR SALE OR TO LET.
THE STORE and a lot of ground known as Lot No. 8, on Block No. 1, in the village and township of FULTON, Rock County, on the Catholic, near its confluence with Rock River, 11 miles northward of Janesville.

[Ballou, in his valuable "History of Cuba," devotes a considerable space to the administration of Tacon, who has left rather a doubtful reputation in Havana, his energy in effecting improvements having been combined with such a degree of violence that to the people at large he was an object of terror, rather than of gratitude. In accomplishing his purposes, life was counted of little value, and many of the first people were sacrificed to his unscrupulous zeal. The following story, which was related to the author in Havana, illustrates his romantic love of justice:—]

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his class in intelligence, appearance and associations, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and loved the beautiful Miralda with an ardent romantic in his fidelity and truth. He was a sort of leader among the boatmen in the harbor by reason of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick-witted sagacity was often turned for the benefit of his comrades. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor since a boy, for he had followed his calling of waterman from boyhood, as his fathers had done before him. Miralda in turn ardently loved Pedro; and when he came at night and sat in the back part of her little shop, she had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his lips. Now and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would hitch a tiny sail in the prow of his boat and securing the little stern awning over Miralda's head, steer out into the gulf and coast along the romantic shore.

There was a famous rose, well known at this time in Havana, named count Almonte, who had frequently visited Miralda's shop and conceived quite a passion for the girl, and, indeed, he had grown to be one of her most liberal customers. With a cunning shrewdness and knowledge of human nature, the count besought the heart of his intended victim without appearing to do so, and carried on his plan of operations for many weeks before the innocent girl even suspected his possessing a partiality for her, until one day she was surprised by a present from him of so rare and costly a nature as to lead her to suspect the donor's intention at once, and to promptly decline the offered gift. Undismayed by this, still the count continued his profuse patronage in a way to which Miralda could find no plausible pretext of complaint.

At last, seizing upon what he considered a favorable moment, Count Almonte declared his passion to Miralda, besought her to come and be the mistress of his broad and rich estates at Cerito near the city, and offered all the promises of wealth, favor and fortune; but in vain. The pure-minded girl scorned his offer, and bade him never more insult her by visiting her shop. Abashed but not confounded, the count retired, but only to weave a new snare whereby he could entangle her, for he was not one to be so easily thwarted.

One afternoon not long after this, as the twilight was settling over the town, a file of soldiers halted just opposite the door of the little cigar-shop, when a young man, wearing a lieutenant's insignia, entered and asked the attendant if her name was Miralda Estalez, to which she timidly responded.

"Then you will please to come with me."

"By what authority?" asked the trembling girl.

"The order of the governor-general."

"Then I must obey you," she answered, and prepared to follow him at once.

Stepping to the door with her, the young officer directed his men to march on; and, getting into a volante, told Miralda they would drive to the guard house. But, to the surprise of the girl, she soon after discovered that they were rapidly passing the city gates, and immediately after were dashing off on the road to Cerito. Then it was that she began to fear some trick had been played upon her; and these fears were soon confirmed by the volante's turning down the long alley of palms that led to the estate of Count Almonte. It was in vain to expostulate now; she felt that she was in the power of that reckless nobleman, and the pretended officer and soldiers were his own people, who had adopted the disguise of the Spanish army uniform.

Count Almonte met her at the door, told her to fear no violence, that her wishes should be respected in all things, save her personal liberty; that he trusted in time, to persuade her to look more favorably upon him, and that in all things he was her slave. She replied contemptuously to his words, and charged him with the cowardly trick by which he had gained control of her liberty. But she was left by herself, though watched by his orders at all times to prevent her escape.

She knew very well that the power and will of Count Almonte were too strong for any humble friend of hers to attempt to thwart; and yet she somehow felt a conscious strength in Pedro, and secretly cherished the idea that he would discover her place of confinement, and adopt some means to deliver her. The stiletto is the constant companion of the lower class, and Miralda had been used to wear one even in her store against contingency; but she now regarded the tiny weapon with peculiar satisfaction, and slept with it in her bosom!

Small was the clue by which Pedro Mantuana discovered the trick of Count Almonte. First this was found out, then that circumstance, and these, being put together, they led to other results, until the indefatigable lover was at last fully satisfied that he had discovered her place of confinement. Disguised as a friar of the order of San Felipe, he sought Count Almonte's gates at a favorable moment, met Miraldi, cheered her with fresh hopes, and retired to arrange some certain plan for her delivery. There was time to think now; heretofore he had not permitted himself even an hour's sleep; but she was safe, that was not in immediate danger, and he could breathe more freely. He knew not with whom to advise; he feared to speak with those about him in society, lest they might betray his purpose to the count, and his own liberty, by some means, be thus jeopardized. He could consider with no one but himself; he must be his own counsellor in this critical case.

At last, as if in despair, he started to his feet one day, and exclaimed to himself, "Why not go to head quarters at once? why not see the governor-general and tell him the whole truth? Ah! see him?—how is that to be effected?—And then this Count Almonte is a nobleman! They say Tacon loves justice. We shall see. I will go to the governor-general; it cannot do any harm, if it does not do any good. I can but try." And Pedro did seek the governor. True, he did not at once get audience of him—not the first, second, nor the third time; but he persevered, and was admitted at last. Here he told his story in a free, manly voice, undisguisedly and openly in all things, so that Tacon was pleased.

"And the girl," asked the governor general, over whose countenance a dark scowl had gathered, "is she thy sister?"

"No, Excellencia, she is dearer still; she is my betrothed."

The governor, bidding him come nearer, took a golden cross from his table, and handing it to the boatman, as he regarded him searchingly, said:

"Swear that what you have related to me is true, as you hope for heaven!"

"I swear!" said Pedro, kneeling and kissing the emblem with simple reverence.

The governor turned to his table, wrote a few brief lines, and touching a bell, summoned a page from an adjoining room, whom he ordered to send the captain of the guard to him. Prompt as were all who had any connection with the governor's household, the officer appeared at once, and received the written order, with directions to bring count Almonte and a young girl named Miralda immediately before him. Pedro was sent to an ante-room, and the business of the day passed on as usual in the reception hall of the governor.

Less than two hours had transpired when the count and Miralda stood before Tacon. Neither knew the nature of the business which had summoned them there. Almonte half suspected the truth, and the poor girl argued to herself that her fate could not be improved by the interference, let its nature be what it might.

"Count Almonte, you doubtless know why I have ordered you to appear."

"Excellencia, I fear that I have been indiscreet," was the reply.

"You adopted the uniform of the guards for your own private purposes upon this young girl, did you not?"

"Excellencia, I cannot deny it."

"Declare, upon your honor, count Almonte, whether she is unharmed whom you have thus kept a prisoner."

"Excellencia, she is as pure as when she entered beneath my roof," was the truthful reply.

The governor turned, and whispered something to his page, then continued his questions to the count, while he made some minutes upon paper. Pedro was now summoned to explain some matter, and as he entered, the governor general turned his back for one moment as if to seek for some papers upon his table, while Miralda was pressed into the boatman's arms. It was but for a moment, and the next, Pedro was bowing humbly before Tacon. A few moments more and the governor's page returned, accompanied by a monk of the church of Santa Clara, with the emblems of his office.

"Holy father," said Tacon, "you will bind the hands of this count Almonte and Miralda Estalez together in the bonds wedlock?"

"Excellencia!" exclaimed the count in amazement.

"Not another word, Sonor; it is your part to obey!"

"My nobility, excellencia!"

"Is forfeited!" said Tacon.

Count Almonte had too many evidences before his mind's eye of Tacon's mode of administering justice, and of enforcing his own will, to dare to rebel, and he doggedly yielded in silence. Poor Pedro, not daring to speak, was half-crazed to see the prize he had so long coveted thus about to be torn from him. In a few moments the ceremony was performed, the trembling and bewildered girl not daring to thwart the governor's orders, and the priest declared them husband and wife. The captain of the guard was summoned and despatched with a written order, and in a few subsequent moments count Almonte, completely subdued and broken-spirited, was ordered to return to his plantation. Pedro and Miralda were directed to remain in an adjoining apartment to that which had been the scene of this singular procedure. Count Almonte mounted his horse and with a single attendant soon passed the gates of the city. But hardly had he passed the corner of the Paseo, when a dozen muskets fired a volley upon him, and he fell a corpse upon the road.

His body was quickly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, made a minute upon his order as to the time and place, and, mounting his horse, rode to the governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more summoned before the governor.

"Is the count dead?"

"Excellencia, yes."

"Proclaim in the usual manner, the marriage of count Almonte and Miralda Estalez, and also that she is his legal widow, possess of all his titles and estates. See that a proper officer attends her to the count's estate, and enforces this decision. Then turning to Pedro Mantuana, he said, "No man or woman in this island is so humble but that they may claim justice from Tacon!"

This story furnishes its own moral.

Some time last March, if our memory serves us, the Washington Union announced the New Hampshire election with the exuberant flourish of "Behold, how brightly breaks the morning!" A correspondent wishes us respectfully to inquire of the Union whether the morning, which so brightly dawned upon its dazzled vision still shines, or whether it was not somewhat in the condition of the young sluggard who, when reminded by his more wakeful companion that day was breaking, gruffly responded, let the concern break, it don't owe me anything!

The reduction in size of the New York Tribune, making the paper on which it is printed cost a dollar less a year, offsets a saving on its aggregate circulation of about six hundred dollars per week, or thirty-one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

The Say-Notings have made a clean sweep in Louisiana. The Courier of the 9th says:

"Among the many results of the election, it was a note-worthy fact that all the candidates who made the most noise and talk were the hindmost in the race and the worst beaten. On the other hand, those who had the least to say, and were almost unknown on the stump, were triumphantly elected."

BOOK ITEMS.

Blackwood for August presents to the lovers of the old fashioned, solid style of quarterly, the usual attractive bill of fare. A capital letter on "the Insurrection of Spain," and a chapter on "Student life in Scotland," will be most interesting to the general reader, while the more philosophically inclined will find ample opportunity for careful reading in the article on "the Ethnology of Europe."

The Edinburgh Review for this month possesses more than ordinary attraction to the politician, treating as it does, in several articles, well written and independent, the "Eastern question." A fine toned and appreciative article on "Eschylus" will be read with interest by those who retain their interest in "the classics."

The North British Review offers a choice collection, among the most interesting of which, we notice a general review of Vinet's writings, and of several translations from Dante.

Our reading public are offered a fair opportunity to keep posted on the current literature of our trans-Atlantic friends in these reviews, and the very cheap rate at which they are afforded, places them within the reach of all.

We learn that Dr. Hoyt, of St. Croix, was nominated at Mineral Point, and that full-blooded Nebraska resolutions were adopted.

THE IOWA ELECTION.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, dated August 26th, gives revised returns of the members elect to the legislature. They sum up:

Anti-Nebraska. Dodge & Douglas. Senate.....16.....14 House.....41.....29

Joint Ballot.....57.....43

One senator, (from Polk, &c.) to be heard from; one tie in the house, (from Scott county.) We understand that some of the members classed as anti-Nebraska, are not whigs.

The same letter gives us returns for congress from all the counties in the southern district but eight very new ones, which foot up majorities in ten counties for Clark. . . . 1,538 majorities in seventeen counties for Hall 1,300

R. L. B. Clark (anti-Douglas) ahead. . . . 148

The counties to be heard from are Adair, Audubon, Montgomery, Page, Ringgold, Taylor, Union and Wayne, only three of which were organized in '52, when those three gave Scott 95, and Pierce 108 votes. The correspondent thinks they all cannot now have given over fifty majority either way, and that Clark is consequently elected.—Chicago Tribune.

The Dubuque Express, of August 30th, states that a letter had been received from the auditor of the state, asserting that the returns in his office showed the election of Mr. Hall, and gave the senate to the Nebraska and Dodge party by one majority. We have seen this statement nowhere else and do not know what credit to attach to it.

We find in the Galena Jeffersonian a fuller account of the stabbing affray at Hazel Green than we have before published. The Jeffersonian says:

Most of the filthy and degraded denizens of the "Cotton Farm," and other places of that like, in the vicinity of Galena, leave the country during the sittings of the grand jury. A few days ago in anticipation of this event, thirteen women and seven men went out to Jefferson, in the neighborhood of Hazel Green, in a spot beyond the jurisdiction of an Illinois court, and where they could for a time pursue—both pimps and panders—their calling, without interruption by the officers of the law. Among them was a man named Young and his drab, who endeavored to rent a room in Hazel Green, from a grocery keeper, a blind man, named Flinn. His wife objected, and Young commenced abusing her for her scruples in a violent and ruffianly manner. At this moment a respectable old man, James Field, happened along and remonstrated with Young in an angry tone for his treatment of the woman. Young after a little altercation, rushed upon him and stabbed him so severely that his recovery is a matter of doubt. Young was arrested, and after an examination, sent to the county jail at Lancaster.

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the Green to take the matter of the woman and the "men" into consideration, and to devise the best means of ridding the neighborhood of their dangerous and disagreeable presence.—The result we have not heard.

BELOIT DISTRICT CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the Republicans of Beloit, Turtle and Clinton, held pursuant to a call from the county convention of Rock county to those opposed to the Nebraska inquiry, Dr. A. I. BENNETT was called to the chair. L. G. FISHER was elected vice president, and J. A. BREWSTER, secretary. The call for the meeting having been read, on motion, Dr. A. I. BENNETT and S. G. COLLEY were elected delegates to represent this district in the congressional convention called at Mineral Point, on the 18th of September. C. L. MARTIN and J. N. REYNOLDS were elected vice-delegates. It was voted that one committeeman be appointed from each town in this district as a vigilance committee. JOHN BANNISTER was appointed for Beloit, L. P. HARVEY for Turtle, and THOMAS TUTTLE for Clinton. It was unanimously resolved, That we heartily endorse and cheerfully adopt the platform enacted by the people of Wisconsin, on the 18th of July last; and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure and maintain the principles therein proclaimed.

After listening to some remarks by L. P. Harvey and others, and voting that the county papers be requested to publish the proceedings of the meeting, on motion the convention adjourned.

MASS CONVENTION AT ROCKFORD.—The proceedings of the mass republican meeting at Rockford, held last Wednesday, will be found in this paper. The resolutions to support for office only such men as are true friends of rational freedom, and to unite cordially with others in the support of such in the coming elections, are right to the point, and will tell. Freemen must vote like freemen, or they must expect to be treated like slaves by the very men whom they pamper and puff up. And when a great wrong has been perpetrated, against all justice, good faith and honor, as was the case in the repeal of the Missouri compromise, it is time for MANHOOD to show itself in dignified, direct and manly acts. If it is a question with any, whether the governing power in this country rests in the hands of a comparatively few unprincipled political sharpers, or in the breasts of an honest and high principled people, it is time that all doubt should be removed from the minds of all on that point; and we hail the spirit of the Rockford convention as the sure harbinger for good to this end, for it is not only proposed, but it took one step toward a thorough solution of the question in the nomination of Mr. Washburne for congress. The vital point, however, in the whole matter is the voting, yet to take place.—The convention did perfectly right in adjuring all party ties, whenever they stand in the way of carrying of just measures through the efficient support of just men. This was all we asked of the free soil party in 1844—it was all we asked in '48 and '52. IT IS ALL WE ASK NOW.—Galena Gazette.

The New York Tribune copies the statement of Judge Wording, of Racine, of his interview with Gen. Pierce in Concord, preceding the presidential election, and says:

This is all plain and clear, and it shows that Gen. Pierce held very different opinions before election from those which have since been illustrated by his public career. This is not surprising, since then he was anxious to get votes, and was no doubt ready to be all things to all men. Besides, it has never been suspected that fidelity to his personal word was one of the president's characteristics. Thus he promised the French mission to Gen. Dix, but didn't keep the pledge; he promised the Albany post-office to Mr. Johnson, of The Albany Argus, and appointed another man; he promised the place of district attorney to Mr. T. R. Westbrook, in consideration of his vote for the Nebraska bill, and appointed John McKeon, a bitter enemy of his administration, while Westbrook was one of its most unscrupulous and venal friends. We might go on and name other instances without number in which Gen. Pierce has failed to keep his word. In a gentleman this is regarded as a serious failing, but in a president and a democrat it is probably of little consequence. It is even generally believed that before Mr. Douglas embarked in his famous Nebraska speculation, he procured the adherence to it of Gen. Pierce in writing, not thinking it safe to trust any verbal pledges of that distinguished, but weak and slippery functionary. From these simple facts, Judge Wording and the western gentlemen who, like him, were humbugged previous to the election of 1852, may see that they are not treated by Gen. Pierce any worse than others, and that they have no particular reason to complain that they have been taken in by him. When a man is served no more shabbily than his neighbors, he ought not to grumble as being especially ill-treated.

THE RAILROAD.—We learn by a gentleman who has been in company with the Messrs. Clinton and Peck of the M. & M. R. Co., who are now engaged in the several towns holding meetings, explaining the plan of the company, and taking mortgages for stock in the road, that some over $160,000 of stock has been taken and but four towns as yet been visited by the agents. It is now the expectation that a sufficient amount of stock will be taken during the week, to complete the consolidation—and this will warrant the purchase of the iron for the road as far as to Monroe—which will be effected immediately by Mr. Holton, who is now in New York on business connected with the road. There will be an opportunity to take stock at Monroe during this week.—Monroe Sentinel, 6th inst.

CHANGES IN STOCKS.—The New York Journal of Commerce of Saturday publishes the following incident, showing what changes are effected in stocks by apparently trifling occurrences:

"An illustration of the feverishness which characterizes the market was given at the first board. Just at the first call it was announced that commodore Vanderbilt had been thrown from a carriage in Broadway, and severely injured. Erie at once declined, and why? Was not the commodore to lend \$100,000 to Erie, and if he was injured might he not die! And if he died might not the loan fail? But lo! just at the second call, it was ascertained that it was not the commodore, but Capt. S. Vanderbilt who was injured. Erie at once recovered and sold at 35 $\frac{1}{2}$. These changes would be simply ridiculous, if upon such trifles did not hang the pecuniary fortunes of the operators.

The gentlest task master we ever know of, is a blacksmith, who says, every evening to his apprentices—"come boys, let's leave off work and go to sawing wood." This blacksmith must be a brother of a farmer down east, who one season when he was building a new house, used to try and get his hired men out with him to play dig cellar by moonlight.

MOVEMENT AMONG RAILROAD MEN.—The superintendents and officers of different western railroad companies held a meeting at Chicago a few days since, for a similar purpose to that of the recent eastern railroad convention. They passed various resolutions with a view to economy in their business, which they express their determination to practically test.

Col. Baylie Peyton, the chairman of the whig state committee, of California, in a speech before the state convention, said the "Nebraska bill was one of the vilest humbugs ever introduced into congress." This does not look as if the whigs of that state had endorsed the swindle as some of the democratic papers assert.

The circuit court for Greene county is now in session in this village, Judge Doolittle presiding. We learn that there is considerable business before the court.—Monroe Sentinel.

If incivility proceeds from pride, it deserves to be hated; if from brutishness, it is only contemptible.

IN PROBATE—COUNTY COURT OF ROCK COUNTY.

In matter of the estate of Sumner C. French, deceased.

OR

[Ballou, in his valuable "History of Cuba," devotes a considerable space to the administration of Tacon, who has left rather a doubtful reputation in Havana, his energy in effecting improvements having been combined with such a degree of violence that to the people at large he was an object of terror, rather than of gratitude. In accomplishing his purposes, life was counted of little value, and many of the first people were sacrificed to his unscrupulous zeal. The following story, which was related to the author in Havana, illustrates his romantic love of justice:—]

During the first year of Tacon's governorship, there was a young Creole girl named Miralda Estalez, who kept a little cigar store in the Calle de Mercedes, and whose shop was the resort of all the young men of the town who loved a choicely-made and superior cigar. Miralda was only seventeen, without mother or father living, and earned a humble though sufficient support by her industry in the manufacture we have named, and by the sale of her little store. She was a picture of ripened tropical beauty, with a finely-rounded form, a lovely face of soft, olive tint, and teeth that a Tuscan might envy her. At times, there was a dash of languor in her dreamy eye that would have warmed an anchorite; and then her cheerful jests were so delicate yet free, that she had unwittingly turned the heads, not to say hearts, of half the young merchants in the Calle de Mercedes. But she dispensed her favors without partiality; none of the rich and gay exquisites of Havana could say they had ever received any particular acknowledgment from the fair young girl for their warm and constant attention. For this one she had a pleasant smile, for another a few words of pleasing gossip, and for a third a snatch of a Spanish song; but to none did she give her confidence except to young Pedro Mantuana, a fine looking boatman, who plied between the Punta and Moro castle, on the opposite side of the harbor.

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his class in intelligence, appearance and associations, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and loved the beautiful Miralda with an ardent romantic in his fidelity and truth. He was a sort of leader among the boatmen in the harbor by reason of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick-witted sagacity was often turned for the benefit of his comrades. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor since a boy, for he had followed his calling of waterman from boyhood, as his fathers had done before him. Miralda in turn ardently loved Pedro; and when he came at night and sat in the back part of her little shop, she had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his lips. Now and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would hitch a tiny sail in the prow of his boat and securing the little stern awning over Miralda's head, steer out into the gulf and coast along the romantic shore.

There was a famous rose, well known at this time in Havana, named count Almonte, who had frequently visited Miralda's shop and conceived quite a passion for the girl, and, indeed, he had grown to be one of her most liberal customers. With a cunning shrewdness and knowledge of human nature, the count besought the heart of his intended victim without appearing to do so, and carried on his plan of operations for many weeks before the innocent girl even suspected his possessing a partiality for her, until one day she was surprised by a present from him of so rare and costly a nature as to lead her to suspect the donor's intention at once, and to promptly decline the offered gift. Undismayed by this, still the count continued his profuse patronage in a way to which Miralda could find no plausible pretext of complaint.

At last, seizing upon what he considered a favorable moment, Count Almonte declared his passion to Miralda, besought her to come and be the mistress of his broad and rich estates at Cerito near the city, and offered all the promises of wealth, favor and fortune; but in vain. The pure-minded girl scorned his offer, and bade him never more insult her by visiting her shop. Abashed but not confounded, the count retired, but only to weave a new snare whereby he could entangle her, for he was not one to be so easily thwarted.

One afternoon not long after this, as the twilight was settling over the town, a file of soldiers halted just opposite the door of the little cigar-shop, when a young man, wearing a lieutenant's insignia, entered and asked the attendant if her name was Miralda Estalez, to which she promptly responded.

"Then you will please to come with me," "By what authority?" asked the trembling girl.

"The order of the governor-general," "Then I must obey you," she answered, and prepared to follow him at once.

Stepping to the door with her, the young officer directed his men to march on; and, getting into a volante, told Miralda they would drive to the guard house. But, to the surprise of the girl, she soon after discovered that they were rapidly passing the city gates, and immediately after were dashing off on the road to Cerito. Then it was that she began to fear some trick had been played upon her; and these fears were soon confirmed by the volante's turning down the long alley of palms that led to the estate of Count Almonte. It was in vain to expostulate now; she felt that she was in the power of that reckless nobleman, and the pretended officer and soldiers were his own people, who had adopted the disguise of the Spanish army uniform.

Count Almonte met her at the door, told her to fear no violence, that her wishes should be respected in all things, save her personal liberty; that he trusted in time, to persuade her to look more favorably upon him, and that in all things he was her slave. She replied contemptuously to his words, and charged him with the cowardly trick by which he had gained control of her liberty. But she was left by herself, though watched by his orders at all times to prevent her escape.

She knew very well that the power and will of Count Almonte were too strong for any humble friend of hers to attempt to thwart; and yet she somehow felt a conscious strength in Pedro, and secretly cherished the idea that he would discover her place of confinement, and adopt some means to deliver her. The stiletto is the constant companion of the lower class, and Miralda had been used to wear one even in her store against contingency; but she now regarded the tiny weapon with peculiar satisfaction, and slept with it in her bosom!

Small was the clue by which Pedro Mantuana discovered the trick of Count Almonte. First this was found out, then that circumstance, and these, being put together, they led to other results, until the indefatigable lover was at last fully satisfied that he had discovered her place of confinement. Disguised as a friar of the order of San Felipe, he sought Count Almonte's gates at a favorable moment, met Miraldi, cheered her with fresh hopes, and retired to arrange some certain plan for her delivery. There was time to think now; heretofore he had not permitted himself even an hour's sleep; but she was safe,—that is, not in immediate danger,—and he could breathe more freely. He knew not with whom to advise; he feared to speak with those about him in society, lest they might betray his purpose to the count, and his own liberty, by some means, be thus jeopardized. He could consider with no one but himself; he must be his own counsellor in this critical case.

At last, as if in despair, he started to his feet one day, and exclaimed to himself, "Why not go to head quarters at once? why not see the governor-general and tell him the whole truth? Ah! see him?—how is that to be effected?—And then this Count Almonte is a nobleman! They say Tacon loves justice. We shall see. I will go to the governor-general; it cannot do any harm, if it does not do any good. I can but try." And Pedro did seek the governor. True, he did not at once get audience of him—not the first, second, nor the third time; but he persevered, and was admitted at last. Here he told his story in a free, manly voice, undisguisedly and openly in all things, so that Tacon was pleased.

"And the girl," asked the governor general, over whose countenance a dark scowl had gathered, "is she thy sister?"

"No, Excellencia, she is dearer still; she is my betrothed."

The governor, bidding him come nearer, took a golden cross from his table, and handing it to the boatman, as he regarded him searchingly, said:

"Swear that what you have related to me is true, as you hope for heaven!"

"I swear!" said Pedro, kneeling and kissing the emblem with simple reverence.

The governor turned to his table, wrote a few brief lines, and touching a bell, summoned a page from an adjoining room, whom he ordered to send the captain of the guard to him.—Prompt as were all who had any connection with the governor's household, the officer appeared at once, and received the written order, with directions to bring count Almonte and a young girl named Miralda immediately before him.—Pedro was sent to an ante-room, and the business of the day passed on as usual in the reception hall of the governor.

Less than two hours had transpired when the count and Miralda stood before Tacon. Neither knew the nature of the business which had summoned them there. Almonte half suspected the truth, and the poor girl argued to herself that her fate could not be improved by the interference, let its nature be what it might.

"Count Almonte, you doubtless know why I have ordered you to appear."

"Excellencia, I fear that I have been indiscreet," was the reply.

"You adopted the uniform of the guards for your own private purposes upon this young girl, did you not?"

"Excellencia, I cannot deny it."

"Declare, upon your honor, count Almonte, whether she is unharmed whom you have thus kept a prisoner."

"Excellencia, she is as pure as when she entered beneath my roof," was the truthful reply.

The governor turned, and whispered something to his page, then continued his questions to the count, while he made some minutes upon paper. Pedro was now summoned to explain some matter, and as he entered, the governor general turned his back for one moment as if to seek for some papers upon his table, while Miralda was pressed into the boatman's arms. It was but for a moment, and the next, Pedro was bowing humbly before Tacon. A few moments more and the governor's page returned, accompanied by a monk of the church of Santa Clara, with the emblems of his office.

"Holy father," said Tacon, "you will bind the hands of this count Almonte and Miralda Estalez together in the bonds wedlock?"

"Excellencia!" exclaimed the count in amazement.

"Not another word, Sonor; it is your part to obey!"

"My nobility, excellencia!"

"Is forfeited!" said Tacon.

Count Almonte had too many evidences before his mind's eye of Tacon's mode of administering justice, and of enforcing his own will, to dare to rebel, and he doggedly yielded in silence. Poor Pedro, not daring to speak, was half-crazed to see the prize he had so long coveted thus about to be torn from him. In a few moments the ceremony was performed, the trembling and bewildered girl not daring to thwart the governor's orders, and the priest declared them husband and wife. The captain of the guard was summoned and despatched with a written order, and in a few subsequent moments count Almonte, completely subdued and broken-spirited, was ordered to return to his plantation. Pedro and Miralda were directed to remain in an adjoining apartment to that which had been the scene of this singular procedure. Count Almonte mounted his horse and with a single attendant soon passed the gates of the city. But hardly had he passed the corner of the Paseo, when a dozen muskets fired a volley upon him, and he fell a corpse upon the road.

His body was quickly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, made a minute upon his order as to the time and place, and, mounting his horse, rode to the governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more summoned before the governor.

"Is the count dead?"

"Excellencia, yes."

"Proclaim in the usual manner, the marriage of count Almonte and Miralda Estalez, and also that she is his legal widow, possess of all his titles and estates. See that a proper officer attends her to the count's estate, and enforces this decision. Then turning to Pedro Mantuana, he said, "No man or woman in this island is so humble but that they may claim justice from Tacon!"

This story furnishes its own moral.

Some time last March, if our memory serves us, the Washington Union announced the New Hampshire election with the exuberant flourish of "Behold, how brightly breaks the morning!" A correspondent wishes us respectfully to inquire of the Union whether the morning which so brightly dawned upon its dazzled vision still shines, or whether it was not somewhat in the condition of the young gladiator who, when reminded by his more wakeful companion that day was breaking, gruffly responded, let the concern break, it don't owe me anything!—Boston Atlas.

The reduction in size of the New York Tribune, making the paper on which it is printed cost a dollar less a year, effects a saving on its aggregate circulation of about six hundred dollars per week, or thirty-one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

The Say-Notings have made a clean sweep in Louisiana. The Courier of the 9th says:

"Among the many results of the election, it was a note-worthy fact that all the candidates who made the most noise and talk were the hindmost in the race and the worst beaten. On the other hand, those who had the least to say, and were almost unknown on the stump, were triumphantly elected."

BOOK ITEMS.

Blackwood for August presents to the lovers of the old fashioned, solid style of quarterly, the usual attractive bill of fare. A capital letter on "the Insurrection of Spain," and a chapter on "Student life in Scotland," will be most interesting to the general reader, while the more philosophically inclined will find ample opportunity for careful reading in the article on "the Ethnology of Europe."

The Edinburgh Review for this month possesses more than ordinary attraction to the politician, treating as it does, in several articles, well written and independent, the "Eastern question." A fine toned and appreciative article on "Eschylus" will be read with interest by those who retain their interest in "the classics."

The North British Review offers a choice collection, among the most interesting of which, we notice a general review of Vinet's writings, and of several translations from Dante.

Our reading public are offered a fair opportunity to keep posted on the current literature of our trans-Atlantic friends in these reviews, and the very cheap rate at which they are afforded, places them within the reach of all.

We learn that Dr. Hoyt, of St. Croix, was nominated at Mineral Point, and that full-blooded Nebraska resolutions were adopted.

THE IOWA ELECTION.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, dated August 26th, gives revised returns of the members elect to the legislature. They sum up:

Anti-Nebraska. Dodge & Douglas.	Senate.....16.....14
House.....41.....29

Joint Ballot.....57.....43

One senator, (from Polk, &c.) to be heard from; one tie in the house, (from Scott county.) We understand that some of the members classed as anti-Nebraska, are not whigs.

The same letter gives us returns for congress from all the counties in the southern district but eight very new ones, which foot up majorities in ten counties for Clark. . . . 1,538 majorities in seventeen counties for Hall 1,300

R. L. B. Clark (anti-Douglas) ahead. . . . 148

The counties to be heard from are Adair, Audubon, Montgomery, Page, Ringgold, Taylor, Union and Wayne, only three of which were organized in '52, when those three gave Scott 95, and Pierce 108 votes. The correspondent thinks they all cannot now have given fifty majority either way, and that Clark is consequently elected.—Chicago Tribune.

The Dubuque Express, of August 30th, states that a letter had been received from the auditor of the state, asserting that the returns in his office showed the election of Mr. Hall, and gave the senate to the Nebraska and Dodge party by one majority. We have seen this statement nowhere else and do not know what credit to attach to it.

We find in the Galena Jeffersonian a fuller account of the stabbing affray at Hazel Green than we have before published. The Jeffersonian says:

Most of the filthy and degraded denizens of the "Cotton Farm," and other places of that like, in the vicinity of Galena, leave the country during the sittings of the grand jury. A few days ago in anticipation of this event, thirteen women and seven men went out to Jefferson, in the neighborhood of Hazel Green, in a spot beyond the jurisdiction of an Illinois court, and where they could for a time pursue—both pimps and panders—their calling, without interruption by the officers of the law. Among them was a man named Young and his drab, who endeavored to rent a room in Hazel Green, from a grocery keeper, a blind man, named Flinn. His wife objected, and Young commenced abusing her for her scruples in a violent and ruffianly manner. At this moment a respectable old man, James Field, happened along and remonstrated with Young in an angry tone for his treatment of the woman. Young after a little altercation, rushed upon him and stabbed him so severely that his recovery is a matter of doubt. Young was arrested, and after an examination, sent to the county jail at Lancaster.

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the Green to take the matter of the woman and the "men" into consideration, and to devise the best means of ridding the neighborhood of their dangerous and disagreeable presence.—The result we have not heard.

BELOIT DISTRICT CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the Republicans of Beloit, Turtle and Clinton, held pursuant to a call from the county convention of Rock county to those opposed to the Nebraska inquiry, Dr. A. I. BENNETT was called to the chair. L. G. FISHER was elected vice president, and J. A. BREWSTER, secretary. The call for the meeting having been read, on motion, Dr. A. I. BENNETT and S. G. COLLEY were elected delegates to represent this district in the congressional convention called at Mineral Point, on the 18th of September. C. L. MARTIN and J. N. REYNOLDS were elected vice-delegates. It was voted that one committeeman be appointed from each town in this district as a vigilance committee. JOHN BANNISTER was appointed for Beloit, L. P. HARVEY for Turtle, and THOMAS TUTTLE for Clinton. It was unanimously resolved, That we heartily endorse and cheerfully adopt the platform enacted by the people of Wisconsin, on the 18th of July last; and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure and maintain the principles therein proclaimed.

After listening to some remarks by L. P. Harvey and others, and voting that the county papers be requested to publish the proceedings of the meeting, on motion the convention adjourned. A. I. BENNETT, Pres't. L. G. FISHER, Vice Pres't. J. A. BREWSTER, Sec'y.

The city authorities of Boston have decreed, that all the names of non-residents who come to Boston and get drunk, and are re-arrested, shall be published.

MASS CONVENTION AT ROCKFORD.—The proceedings of the mass republican meeting at Rockford, held last Wednesday, will be found in this paper. The resolutions to support for office only such men as are true friends of rational freedom, and to unite cordially with others in the support of such in the coming elections, are right to the point, and will tell. Freemen must vote like freemen, or they must expect to be treated like slaves by the very men whom they pamper and puff up. And when a great wrong has been perpetrated, against all justice, good faith and honor, as was the case in the repeal of the Missouri compromise, it is time for MANHOOD to show itself in dignified, direct and manly acts. If it is a question with any, whether the governing power in this country rests in the hands of a comparatively few unprincipled political sharpers, or in the breasts of an honest and high principled people, it is time that all doubt should be removed from the minds of all on that point; and we hail the spirit of the Rockford convention as the sure harbinger for good to this end, for it is not only proposed, but it took one step toward a thorough solution of the question in the nomination of Mr. Washburne for congress. The vital point, however, in the whole matter is the voting, yet to take place.—The convention did perfectly right in adjuring all party ties, whenever they stand in the way of carrying of just measures through the efficient support of just men. This was all we asked of the free soil party in 1844—it was all we asked in '48 and '52. IT IS ALL WE ASK NOW.—Galena Gazette.

The New York Tribune copies the statement of Judge Wording, of Racine, of his interview with Gen. Pierce in Concord, preceding the presidential election, and says:

This is all plain and clear, and it shows that Gen. Pierce held very different opinions before election from those which have since been illustrated by his public career. This is not surprising, since then he was anxious to get votes, and was no doubt ready to be all things to all men. Besides, it has never been suspected that fidelity to his personal word was one of the president's characteristics. Thus he promised the French mission to Gen. Dix, but didn't keep the pledge; he promised the Albany post-office to Mr. Johnson, of The Albany Argus, and appointed another man; he promised the place of district attorney to Mr. T. R. Westbrook, in consideration of his vote for the Nebraska bill, and appointed John McKeon, a bitter enemy of his administration, while Westbrook was one of its most unscrupulous and venal friends. We might go on and name other instances without number in which Gen. Pierce has failed to keep his word. In a gentleman this is regarded as a serious failing, but in a president and a democrat it is probably of little consequence. It is even generally believed that before Mr. Douglas embarked in his famous Nebraska speculation, he procured the adherence to it of Gen. Pierce in writing, not thinking it safe to trust any verbal pledges of that distinguished, but weak and slippery functionary. From these simple facts, Judge Wording and the western gentlemen who, like him, were humbugged previous to the election of 1852, may see that they are not treated by Gen. Pierce any worse than others, and that they have no particular reason to complain that they have been taken in by him. When a man is served no more shabbily than his neighbors, he ought not to grumble as being especially ill-treated.

THE RAILROAD.—We learn by a gentleman who has been in company with the Messrs. Clinton and Peck of the M. & M. R. Co., who are now engaged in the several towns holding meetings, explaining the plan of the company, and taking mortgages for stock in the road, that some over $160,000 of stock has been taken and but four towns as yet been visited by the agents. It is now the expectation that a sufficient amount of stock will be taken during the week, to complete the consolidation—and this will warrant the purchase of the iron for the road as far as to Monroe—which will be effected immediately by Mr. Holton, who is now in New York on business connected with the road. There will be an opportunity to take stock at Monroe during this week.—Monroe Sentinel, 6th inst.

CHANGES IN STOCKS.—The New York Journal of Commerce of Saturday publishes the following incident, showing what changes are effected in stocks by apparently trifling occurrences:

"An illustration of the feverishness which characterizes the market was given at the first board. Just at the first call it was announced that commodore Vanderbilt had been thrown from a carriage in Broadway, and severely injured. Erie at once declined, and why? Was not the commodore to lend \$100,000 to Erie, and if he was injured might he not die! And if he died might not the loan fail? But lo! just at the second call, it was ascertained that it was not the commodore, but Capt. S. Vanderbilt who was injured. Erie at once recovered and sold at 35 $\frac{1}{2}$. These changes would be simply ridiculous, if upon such trifles did not hang the pecuniary fortunes of the operators.

The gentlest task master we ever know of, is a blacksmith, who says, every evening to his apprentices—"come boys, let's leave off work and go to sawing wood." This blacksmith must be a brother of a farmer down east, who one season when he was building a new house, used to try and get his hired men out with him to play dig cellar by moonlight.

MOVEMENT AMONG RAILROAD MEN.—The superintendents and officers of different western railroad companies held a meeting at Chicago a few days since, for a similar purpose to that of the recent eastern railroad convention. They passed various resolutions with a view to economy in their business, which they express their determination to practically test.

Col. Baylie Peyton, the chairman of the whig state committee, of California, in a speech before the state convention, said the "Nebraska bill was one of the vilest humbugs ever introduced into congress." This does not look as if the whigs of that state had endorsed the swindle as some of the democratic papers assert.

The circuit court for Greene county is now in session in this village, Judge Doolittle presiding. We learn that there is considerable business before the court.—Monroe Sentinel.

If incivility proceeds from pride, it deserves to be hated; if from brutishness, it is only contemptible.

Janesville, July 10th, 1854.

[Ballou, in his valuable "History of Cuba," devotes a considerable space to the administration of Tacón, who has left rather a doubtful reputation in Havana, his energy in effecting improvements having been combined with such a degree of violence that to the people at large he was an object of terror, rather than of gratitude. In accomplishing his purposes, life was counted of little value, and many of the first people were sacrificed to his insatiable zeal. The following story, which was related to the author in Havana, illustrates his romantic love of justice.]

During the first year of Tacón's governorship, there was a young Creole girl named Miralda Estelaz, who kept a little cigar store in the Calle de Mercedes, and whose shop was the resort of all the young men of the town who loved a choicely-made and superior cigar. Miralda was only seventeen, without mother or father living, and earned a humble though sufficient support by her industry in the manufacture we have named, and by the sale of her little store. She was a picture of ripened tropical beauty, with a finely-rounded form, a lovely face of soft, olive tint, and teeth that a Tuscan might envy her. At times, there was a dash of languor in her dreamy eye that would have warmed an anchorite; and then her cheerful jests were so delicate yet free, that she had unwittingly turned the heads, not to say hearts, of half the young men in the Calle de Mercedes. But she dispensed her favors without partiality; none of the rich and gay exquisites of Havana could say they had ever received any particular acknowledgment from the fair young girl to their warm and constant attention. For this one she had a pleasant smile, for another a few words of pleasing gossip, and for a third a snatch of a Spanish song; but to none did she give her confidence except to young Pedro Mantanzas, a fine looking boatman, who plied between the Punta and Moro castle, on the opposite side of the harbor.

Pedro was a manly and courageous young fellow, rather above his class in intelligence, appearance and associations, and pulled his oars with a strong arm and light heart, and loved the beautiful Miralda with an ardent romantic in its fidelity and truth. He was a sort of leader among the boatmen in the harbor by reason of his superior cultivation and intelligence, and his quick witted sagacity was often turned to the benefit of his comrades. Many were the noble deeds he had done in and about the harbor since a boy, for he had followed his calling of waterman from boyhood, as his fathers had done before him. Miralda in turn ardently loved Pedro; and when he came at night and sat in the back part of her little shop, she had always a neat and fragrant cigar for his lips. Now and then, when she could steal away from her shop on some holiday, Pedro would hoist a tiny sail in the prow of his boat and securing the little stern awning over Miralda's head, steer out into the gulf and coast along the romantic shore.

There was a famous rogue, well known at this time in Havana, named count Almonte, who had frequently visited Miralda's shop and conceived quite a passion for the girl, and, indeed, he had grown to be one of her most liberal customers. With a cunning shrewdness and knowledge of human nature, the count beseeched the heart of his intended victim without appearing to do so, and carried on his plan of operations for many weeks before the innocent girl even suspected his possessing a partiality for her, until one day she was surprised by a present from him of so rare and costly a nature as to lead her to suspect the donor's intention at once, and to promptly decline the offered gift. Undismayed by this, still the count continued his profuse patronage in a way to which Miralda could find no plausible pretext of complaint.

At last, seizing upon what he considered a favorable moment, Count Almonte declared his passion to Miralda, besought her to come and be the mistress of his broad and rich estates at Cerito near the city, and offered all the promises of wealth, favor and fortune; but in vain. The pure minded girl scorned his offer, and bade him never more insult her by visiting her shop. Ashamed but not confounded, the count retired, but only to weave a new snare whereby he could entangle her, for he was not one to be so easily thwarted.

One afternoon not long after this, as the twilight was settling over the town, a file of soldiers halted just opposite the door of the little cigar-shop, when a young man, wearing a lieutenant's insignia, entered and asked the attendant if her name was Miralda Estelaz, to which she timidly responded.

"Then you will please to come with me," "By what authority?" asked the trembling girl.

"The order of the governor-general," "Then I must obey you," she answered, and prepared to follow him at once.

Stepping to the door with her, the young officer directed his men to march on; and, getting into a volante, told Miralda they would drive to the guard house. But, to the surprise of the girl, she soon after discovered that they were rapidly passing the city gates, and immediately after were dashed off on the road to Cerito. Then it was that she began to fear some trick had been played upon her; and these fears were soon confirmed by the volante's turning down the long alley of palms that led to the estate of Count Almonte. It was in vain to expostulate now; she felt that she was in the power of that reckless nobleman, and the pretended officer and soldiers were his own people, who had adopted the disguise of the Spanish army uniform.

Count Almonte met her at the door, told her to fear no violence, that her wishes should be respected in all things, save her personal liberty; that he trusted in time, to persuade her to look more favorably upon him, and that in all things he was her slave. She replied contemptuously to his words, and charged him with the cowardly trick by which he had gained control of her liberty. But she was left by herself, though watched by his orders at all times to prevent her escape.

She knew very well that the power and will of Count Almonte were too strong for any humble friend of hers to attempt to thwart; and yet she somehow felt a conscious strength in Pedro, and secretly cherished the idea that he would discover her place of confinement, and adopt some means to deliver her. The stiletto is the constant companion of the lower class, and Miralda had been used to wear one even in her store against contiguency; but she now regarded the tiny weapon with peculiar satisfaction, and gloat with it in her bosom!

Said was the clue by which Pedro Mantanzas discovered the trick of Count Almonte. First this was found out, then that circumstance, and these, being put together, they led to other results, until the indefatigable lover was at last fully satisfied that he had discovered her place of confinement. Dignified as a friar of the order of San Felipe, he sought Count Almonte's gates at a favorable moment, met Miralda, cheered her with fresh hopes, and retired to arrange some certain plan for her delivery. There was time to think now; heretofore he had not permitted himself even an hour's sleep; but she was safe,—that is, not in immediate danger,—and he could breathe more freely. He knew not with whom to advise; he feared to speak with those above him in society, lest they might betray his purpose to the count, and his own liberty, by some means, be thus jeopardized. He could consider with no one but himself; he must be his own counsellor in this critical case.

At last, as if in despair, he started to his feet one day, and exclaimed to himself, "Why not go to head quarters at once? why not see the governor-general and tell him the whole truth? Ah! see him?—how is that to be effected?—And then this Count Almonte is a nobleman! They say Tacón loves justice. We shall see. I will go to the governor general; it cannot do any harm, if it does not do any good. I can but try." And Pedro did seek the governor. True, he did not at once get audience of him—not the first, second, nor the third time; but he persevered, and was admitted at last. Here he told his story in a free, manly voice, undisguisedly and openly in all things, so that Tacón was pleased.

"And the girl," asked the governor general, over whose countenance a dark scowl had gathered, "is she thy sister?"

"No, Excellencia, she is dearer still; she is my betrothed."

The governor, bidding him come nearer, took a golden cross from his table, and handing it to the boatman, as he regarded him searchingly, said:

"Swear that what you have related to me is true, as you hope for heaven!"

"I swear!" said Pedro, kneeling and kissing the emblem with pious reverence.

The governor turned to his table, wrote a few brief lines, and touching a bell, summoned a page from an adjoining room, whom he ordered to send the captain of the guard to him.—Prompts as were all who had any connection with the governor's household, the officer appeared at once, and received the written order, with directions to bring count Almonte and a young girl named Miralda immediately before him.

Pedro was sent to an ante-room, and the business of the day passed on as usual in the reception hall of the governor.

Less than two hours had transpired when the count and Miralda stood before Tacón. Neither knew the nature of the business which had summoned them there. Almonte half suspected the truth, and the poor girl argued to herself that her fate could not be improved by the interference, let its nature be what it might.

"Count Almonte, you doubtless know why I have ordered you to appear."

"Excellencia, I fear that I have been indiscreet," was the reply.

"You adopted the uniform of the guards for your own private purposes upon this young girl, did you not?"

"Excellencia, I cannot deny it."

"Declare, upon your honor, count Almonte, whether she is unharmed whom you have thus kept a prisoner."

"Excellencia, she is as pure as when she entered beneath my roof," was the truthful reply.

The governor turned, and whispered something to his page, then continued his questions to the count, while he made some minutes upon paper. Pedro was now summoned to explain some matter, and as he entered, the governor general turned his back for one moment as if to seek for some papers upon his table, while Miralda was pressed into the boatman's arms. It was but for a moment, and the next, Pedro was bowing humbly before Tacón. A few moments more and the governor's page returned, accompanied by a monk of the church of Santa Clara, with the emblems of his office.

"Holy father," said Tacón, "you will bind the hands of this count Almonte and Miralda Estelaz together in the bonds wedlock?"

"Excellencia!" exclaimed the count in amazement.

"Not another word, Senor; it is your part to obey!"

"My nobility, excellencia!"

"Is forfeited!" said Tacón.

Count Almonte had too many evidences before his mind's eye of Tacón's mode of administering justice and of enforcing his own will, to dare to rebel, and he doggedly yielded in silence. Poor Pedro, not daring to speak, was half crazed to see the prize he had so long coveted thus about to be torn from him. In a few moments the ceremony was performed, the trembling and bewildered girl not daring to thwart the governor's orders, and the priest declared them husband and wife. The captain of the guard was summoned and despatched with a written order, and in a few subsequent moments count Almonte, completely subdued and broken spirited, was ordered to return to his plantation. Pedro and Miralda were directed to remain in an adjoining apartment to that which had been the scene of this singular procedure. Count Almonte mounted his horse and with a single attendant soon passed the gates of the city. But hardly had he passed the corner of the Paseo, when a dozen muskets fired a volley upon him, and he fell a corpse upon the road.

His body was quietly removed, and the captain of the guard, who had witnessed the act, made a minute upon his order as to the time and place, and, mounting his horse, rode to the governor's palace, entering the presence chamber just as Pedro and Miralda were once more summoned before the governor.

"Is the count dead?"

"Excellencia, yes."

"Proclaim in the usual manner, the marriage of count Almonte and Miralda Estelaz, and also that she is his legal widow, possess of all his titles and estates. See that a proper officer attends her to the count's estate, and enforces this decision. Then turning to Pedro Mantanzas, he said, 'No man or woman in this island is so humble but that they may claim justice from Tacón!'"

This story furnishes its own moral.

Some time last March, if my memory serves me, the Washington Union announced the New Hampshire election with the exuberant flourish of "Behold, how brightly breaks the morning!"

A correspondent wishes us respectfully to inquire of the Union whether the morning which so brightly dawned upon its dazzled vision still shines, or whether it was not somewhat in the condition of the young sluggard who, when reminded by his more wakeful companion that day was breaking, gruffly responded, let the concern break, it don't owe me anything!

The reduction in size of the New York Tribune, making the paper on which it is printed cost a dollar less a ream, effects a saving on its aggregate circulation of about six hundred dollars per week, or thirty-one thousand two hundred dollars a year.

The Say-Notings have made a clean sweep in Louisiana. The Courier of the 9th says:

"Among the many results of the election, it was a note-worthy fact that all the candidates who made the most noise and talk were the hindmost in the race and the worst beaten. On the other hand, those who had the least to say, and were almost unknown on the stump, were triumphantly elected."

SATURDAY MORNING, SEPT. 9, 1854.

BOOK ITEMS.

Blackwood for August presents to the lovers of the old fashioned, solid style of quarterly, the usual attractive bill of fare. A capital letter on "the Insurrection of Spain," and a chapter on "Student life in Scotland," will be most interesting to the general reader, while the more philosophically inclined will find ample opportunity for careful reading in the article on "the Ethnology of Europe."

The Edinburgh Review for this month possesses more than ordinary attraction to the politician, treating as it does, in several articles, well written and independent, the "Eastern question." A fine toned and appreciative article on "Eschylus" will be read with interest by those who retain their interest in "the classics."

The North British Review offers a choice collection, among the most interesting of which, we notice a general review of Vinet's writings, and of several translations from Dante.

Our reading public are offered a fair opportunity to keep posted on the current literature of our trans-Atlantic friends in these reviews, and the very cheap rate at which they are afforded, places them within the reach of all.

We learn that Dr. Hoyt, of St. Croix, was nominated at Mineral Point, and that full-blooded Nebraska resolutions were adopted.

THE IOWA ELECTION.—A letter from Burlington, Iowa, dated August 26th, gives revised returns of the members elect to the legislature. They sum up:

Anti-Nebraska. Dodge & Douglas. Senate. 16. House. 41.

Joint Ballot. 67. One senator, (from Polk, &c.) to be heard from; one tie in the house, (from Scott county.) We understand that some of the members classed as anti-Nebraska, are not whigs.

The same letter gives us returns for congress from all the counties in the southern district but eight very new ones, which foot up majorities in ten counties for Clark. 1,638 majorities in seventeen counties for Hall 1,390

R. L. B. Clark (anti-Douglas) ahead. 148 The counties to be heard from are Adair, Audubon, Montgomery, Page, Ringgold, Taylor, Union and Wayne, only three of which were organized in '52, when those three gave Scott 95, and Pierce 108 votes. The correspondent thinks they all cannot now have given over fifty majority either way, and that Clark is consequently elected.—Chicago Tribune.

The Dubuque Express, of August 30th, states that a letter had been received from the auditor of the state, asserting that the returns in his office showed the election of Mr. Hall, and gave the senate to the Nebraska and Dodge party by one majority. We have seen this statement nowhere else and do not know what credit to attach to it.

We find in the Galena Jeffersonian a fuller account of the stabbing affray at Hazel Green than we have before published. The Jeffersonian says:

Most of the filthy and degraded denizens of the "Cotton Farm," and other places of that ilk, in the vicinity of Galena, leave the country during the sittings of the grand jury. A few days ago in anticipation of this event, thirteen women and seven men went out to Jefferson, in the neighborhood of Hazel Green, in a spot beyond the jurisdiction of an Illinois court, and where they could for a time pursue—both plims and panders—their calling, without interruption by the officers of the law. Among them was a man named Young and his drab, who endeavored to rent a room in Hazel Green, from a grocery keeper, a blind man, named Finn. His wife objected, and Young commenced abusing her for her scruples in a violent and ruffianly manner. At this moment a respectable old man, James Field, happened along and remonstrated with Young in an angry tone for his treatment of the woman. Young after a little altercation, rushed upon him and stabbed him so severely that his recovery is a matter of doubt. Young was arrested, and after an examination, sent to the county jail at Lancaster.

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the Green to take the matter of the woman and the "men" into consideration, and to devise the best means of ridding the neighborhood of their dangerous and disagreeable presence.—The result we have not heard.

BELOIT DISTRICT CONVENTION.—At a meeting of the Republicans of Beloit, Tuttle and Clinton, held pursuant to a call from the county convention of Rock county to those opposed to the Nebraska inquiry, Dr. A. I. BENNETT was called to the chair, L. G. FISHER was elected vice president, and J. A. BREWSTER, secretary.

The call for the meeting having been read, on motion, Dr. A. I. BENNETT and S. G. COLLEY were elected delegates to represent this district in the congressional convention called at Mineral point, on the 13th of September. C. L. MARTIN and J. N. REYNOLDS were elected vice-delegates. It was voted that one committeeman be appointed from each town in this district as a vigilance committee. JOHN BANNISTER was appointed for Beloit, L. P. HARVEY for Tuttle, THOMAS TUTTLE for Clinton. It was unanimously resolved, That we heartily endorse and cheerfully adopt the platform enacted by the people of Wisconsin, on the 13th of July last; and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all honorable means to secure and maintain the principles therein proclaimed.

After listening to some remarks by L. P. Harvey and others, and voting that the county papers be requested to publish the proceedings of the meeting, on motion the convention adjourned. A. I. BENNETT, Pres't. L. G. FISHER, Vice Pres't. J. A. BREWSTER, Sec'y.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE copies the statement of Judge Wording, of Racine, of his interview with Gen. Pierce in Concord, preceding the presidential election, and says:

This is all plain and clear, and it shows that Gen. Pierce held very different opinions before election from those which have since been illustrated by his public career. This is not surprising, since then he was anxious to get votes, and was no doubt ready to be all things to all men. Besides, it has never been suspected that fidelity to his personal word was one of the president's characteristics. Thus he promised the French mission to Gen. Dix, but didn't keep the pledge; he promised the Albany post-office to Mr. Johnson, of the Albany Argus, and appointed another man; he promised the place of district attorney to Mr. T. R. Westbrook, in consideration of his vote for the Nebraska bill, and appointed John McKeon, a bitter enemy of his administration, while Westbrook was one of its most unscrupulous and venal friends. We might go on and name other instances without number in which Gen. Pierce has failed to keep his word. In a gentleman this is regarded as a serious failing, but in a president and a democrat it is probably of little consequence. It is even generally believed that before Mr. Douglas embarked in his famous Nebraska speculation, he procured the adherence to it of Gen. Pierce in writing, not thinking it safe to trust any verbal pledges of that distinguished, but weak and slippery functionary. From these simple facts, Judge Wording and the western gentlemen who, like him, were humbugged previous to the election of 1852, may see that they are not treated by Gen. Pierce any worse than others, and that they have no particular reason to complain that they have been taken in by him. When a man is so far from being specially ill-treated.

THE RAILROAD.—We learn by a gentleman who has been in company with the Messrs. Clinton and Peck of the M. & M. R. Co., who are now engaged in the several towns holding meetings, explaining the plan of the company, and taking mortgages for stock in the road, that some over $160,000 of stock has been taken and but four towns as yet been visited by the agents. It is now the expectation that a sufficient amount of stock will be taken during this week, to complete the purchase of the iron for the road as far as to Monroe—which will be effected immediately by Mr. Holton, who is now in New York on business connected with the road.

There will be an opportunity to take stock at Monroe during this week.—Monroe Sentinel, 6th inst.

CHANGES IN STOCKS.—The New York Journal of Commerce of Saturday publishes the following incident, showing what changes are effected in stocks by apparently trifling occurrences:

"An illustration of the feverishness which characterizes the market was given at the first board. Just at the first call it was announced that commodore Vanderbilt had been thrown from a carriage in Broadway, and severely injured. Erie at once declined, and why? Was not the commodore to lend $100,000 to Erie, and if he was injured might he not die! And if he died might not the loan fail? But lo! just at the second call, it was ascertained that it was not the commodore, but Capt. S. Vanderbilt who was injured. Erie at once recovered and sold at 354. These changes would be simply ridiculous, if upon such titles did not hang the pecuniary fortunes of the operators."

The gentlest task master we ever knew of, is a blacksmith, who says, every evening to his apprentices—"come boys, let's leave off work and go to sewing wood." This blacksmith must be a brother of a farmer-down east, who one season when he was building a new house, used to try and get his hired men out with him to play dig cellar by moonlight.

MOVEMENT AMONG RAILROAD MEN.—The superintendents and officers of different western railroad companies held a meeting at Chicago a few days since, for a similar purpose to that of the recent eastern railroad convention. They passed various resolutions with a view to economy in their business, which they express their determination to practically test.

Col. Baylie Peyton, the chairman of the whig state committee, of California, in a speech before the state convention, said the "Nebraska bill was one of the yankee humbugs ever introduced into congress." This does not look as if the whigs of that state had endorsed the swindle as some of the democratic papers assert.

The circuit court for Greene county is now in session in this village, Judge Doolittle presiding. We learn that there is considerable business before the court.—Monroe Sentinel.

MARS CONVENTION AT ROCKFORD.—The proceedings of the mass republican meeting at Rockford, held last Wednesday, will be found in this paper. The resolutions to support for office only such men as are true friends of rational freedom, and to unite cordially with others in the support of such in the coming elections, are right to the point, and will TELL. Freemen must vote like freemen, or they must expect to be treated like slaves by the very men whom they pamper and puff up. And when a great wrong has been perpetrated, against all justice, good faith and honor, as was the case in the repeal of the Missouri compromise, it is time for MANHOOD to show itself in dignified, direct and manly acts. If it is a question with any, whether the governing power in this country rests in the hands of a comparatively few unprincipled political sharpers, or in the breasts of an honest and high principled people, it is time that all doubt should be removed from the minds of all on that point; and we hail the spirit of the Rockford convention as the sure harbinger for good to this end, for it is not only propounded, but it took one step toward a thorough solution of the question in the nomination of Mr. Washburne for congress. The vital point, however, in the whole matter is the vote, yet to take place.—The convention did perfectly right in abjuring all party ties, whenever they stand in the way of carrying of just measures through the efficient support of just men. This was all we asked of the free soil party in 1844—it was all we asked in '48 and '52. IT IS ALL WE ASK NOW.—Galena Gazette.

The ONE PRICE CASH SYSTEM, originally introduced into this community and strictly adhered to by this Establishment, has won for it a reputation far more valuable than the Stupendous Self-purchases, quarterly renewed, and which have been made by universally discredited, which many modern shopkeepers deem indispensable to success.
The system will of course be continued—a limiting no limitation improvement to the satisfaction and advantage of a large and most desirable class of customers, although at the sacrifice probably of the steady patronage of inoperative biggers and those who inherit the belief that all Salesmen will cheat them if possible.
Respectfully

JANESVILLE CLOTHING EMPORIUM.
WM. ADDY,
Merchant Tailor, & Dealer in Ready Made Clothing and Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods.
HAS received his Spring and Summer STOCK, consisting of the very Best and Fashionable CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, DOBBERIES AND VESTINGS, of English, French and American Manufacture.
This establishment is now, as usual, the favorite place of resort for the Fashionable, the Cutting Department still being under my personal supervision, and the most desirable and most difficult, twenty per cent lower than any other establishment in the State.
You will find how I can do this; I will tell you: From my long experience in this business, and being a practical Tailor, I know such where and how to buy my goods, when to buy them, and how to cut them, and not having to secure the services of a cutting artist, at a salary of $1,000 to $1,500 a year, which the purchaser must pay for—this is the secret. I have got on hand a good assortment of
of my own manufacture, and warranted in every respect, cut and examine, before you buy elsewhere.
